City Rejects Police Bid to Ban Fireworks

Aldermen Indignant at 'Worst' Halloween Pranks But Refers Matter to Public Body

City council declined to go all the way on a police commission recommendation to ban sale of fireworks except by special permit, at a meeting Thursday.

Instead it referred the matter to parks committee for report and amendment.

"This is worst Halloween I have ever experienced," declared Ald. Margaret Christie in urging endorsation of the police commission recommendation.

"They threw firecrackers at the windows of my car, and I was scared stiff to drive. When I arrived home all the boxes of flowers and plants were strewn all over my yard."

INJURIES FEARED

Ald. Brent Murdoch feared if "indiscriminate sale" of firecrackers and bombs was allowed to continue someone might be seriously injured. He urged restriction.

"It's a small war now," agreed Ald. Frank Mulliner.

Ald. Robert Macmillan and Ald. Waldo Skillings objected to restrictions on sale.

"I have in mind Rebel Mowat," grinned Ald. Skillings. "About 30 years ago he had a gang in James Bay whose pranks would put to shame anything done these days."

He said talk of suppression was useless when there are not sufficient policemen to enforce a by-law. He stressed supervision in the home.

"It's people 17 to 22 who cause the damage," said Ald. Jim Neely.

Ald. Murdoch urged more organzied entertainment and community bonfires.

"The parks department have gone as far as they can go in that department," said Ald. Mulliner, parks chairman.

Referendum On Firehall Sparks Council Debate

Closure of the Yates Street fire hall last June precipitated another flare-up at city council meeting Thursday.

Controversy arose over wording of a referendum to go to the electorate December 11.

Finance committee recommended the following wording which eventually was accepted by majority vote:

"Are you in favor of the reduction already made to the staff of the fire department in order to meet the city's financial condition?"

SIMPLICITY SOUGHT

Ald. Brent Murdoch wanted something "simple" and suggested: "Are you in favor of closing the Yates Street fire hall?"

He contended his wording would be "more consistent" with the wording on the petition circulated by firemen last spring and signed by the required percentage of eligible voters.

Ald. Robert Macmillan opposed both suggestions. He claimed the finance committee recommendation contained a "reason" when it should merely state a question.

Ald. Percy Scurrah said the reason should be included as it was important.

"Both sides have reasons," said Ald. Macmillan. "You can't put them both in."

Ald. Donald Smith supported Ald. Murdoch's amendment, stating he felt the "economy issue" was missed in the final analysis of the fire hall closure.

"Ask the people straightforward if they favor closure of the hall or not," he said.

CALGARY ASKS FOR HELP

Prospective Power Grid To Cover Entire West

TRAIL, Nov. 14 (CP)—Calgary Power Limited is reported here to be negotiating with Consolidated Mining and Smelting Company of Canada Limited to obtain power from the West Kootenay for relief of a shortage in Alberta.

The Alberta firm proposes to build a 190,000-volt transmission line from Kimberley to its Elk River line. It also is reported that there is a possibility this connection between Calgary Power and the West Kootenay source may be extended in the future to set up a grid system. This system would encompass Consolidated Mining and Smelting Company facilities, Grand Coulee, the B.C. Power Company, B.C. Power Commission facilities, as well as the present grid system in Alberta.

Such an international system would permit surplus power to flow from one district to another and assure all consumers a maximum supply.

Consolidated Mining expects to have a surplus of power when the Waneta project, southeast of Trail, is completed in 1954.

It also is reported that plants of the Celgar Pulp and Paper project at Castlegar may become new consumers of Consolidated Mining & Smelting Co. power.

Too Much Smoke, Soot, Alderman Says in Spite of New Inspector

If a smoke inspector is employed by the city of Victoria, Ald. Donald Smith, for one, would like to meet him.

Ald. Smith presented a letter with eight questions on the subject of smoke control and a smoke inspector to City Council meeting Thursday.

"These are important issues," he said. "There seems to be delay. What is being done to give people relief from smoke, soot and cinders from which they are suffering?"

He was advised a smoke inspector was engaged about two months ago.

"He can't do everything in a day, a week or a month," said Ald. Percy Scurrah.

Countered Ald. Smith: "We've had no report on the man, what he is doing or what he can do."

He asked the name of the inspector; to whom he is responsible; location of his office; accomplishments to date; proposals.

"To what committee would matters pertaining to soot and smoke nuisance be referred?" Ald. Smith queried.

His communication was referred to public works committee and the engineer's office.

Ald. Arthur Dowell took him to task for not asking information of the city manager, rather than writing a letter. Mayor Claude Harrison, however, stated the alderman was within his rights. Ald. Waldo Skillings said the inspector has already been "around the mill section."

Rum stories...

"By the great Horn Spoon, those were gales," said the bosun.

"Not only could we not round the Horn, but the fury of the elements was driving us backwards up the coast of America. Only by the unusual feat of using the bowsprit as a rudder could I keep us from perishing on those inhospitable shores. At this point, a flock of gigantic albatrosses sank exhausted on the deck. Hastily reviving them with tots of our cargo, Lamb's Navy Rum, I harnessed them to the vessel and encouraged them to fly in the desired direction. The upshot was that our time for the Boston-Sacramento run stood as a record for thirty years."

"That's a Rum Story," said the unsuspecting guest.

"Thank you, sir. I should enjoy nothing better than a Lamb's Navy Rum."

STUART KEATE, Publisher — BRUCE HUTCHISON, Editor

Welcome to Mr. Drew

AS THE LEADER OF A GREAT political party and as a public man of distinguished service in war and peace Mr. Drew is welcome in Victoria. We trust that his western tour will acquaint him with the affairs of British Columbia and equip him better for his important task in parliament.

In welcoming Mr. Drew the people of British Columbia have a right to ask his views on the great public questions which he himself has raised but has not answered.

These questions fall into two categories of national policy — taxation at home and trade abroad. On the issues thus involved Mr. Drew apparently intends to fight the next election, as he is perfectly entitled to do.

Concerning the first, Mr. Drew perpetually condemns the government for taxing the people too much. He says the government is collecting more money than it spends and using its surplus to reduce the national debt. Even assuming that it is unwise to reduce the debt and hence the cost of interest (a curious assumption to say the least of it) where is the surplus which Mr. Drew condemns? Mr. Abbott says there will be no surplus this year, that he will spend all the money he collects.

* * *

That part of Mr. Drew's argument apparently collapses before the actual figures of revenue and expenditure. Mr. Drew says, however, that the government is spending too much anyway, should spend less and reduce taxes. That is a fair argument, provided Mr. Drew can tell us where and how spending can be reduced.

Now, the fact of the matter is that every cent of increased taxes imposed since the outbreak of the Korean war is being spent on public services which the Conservative party approved in Parliament.

If Mr. Drew has changed his mind and proposes to reduce these services he is bound to say so candidly. If the national budget can be reduced significantly, as he demands, where are the reductions to be made—in defense, which takes half the total; in social security, which takes about 20 per cent; in subsidies to the provinces, which take 3 per cent; in interest charges, which take over 13 per cent?

If these expenditures are not to be cut how does Mr. Drew propose to reduce what remains, the overhead cost of government? If he knows how to cut it the public will welcome his proposals. But apart from a few minor items which would make no perceptible difference in taxes Mr. Drew has suggested no change.

In the field of trade Mr. Drew is talking again, as he did in the 1949 election, about "convertibility." He wishes pounds to be made convertible into dollars. And who does not? But the convertibility of pounds is not a matter under Canadian control. It is solely the business of the British government.

The British government does not make pounds convertible simply because it does not presently possess enough dollars to meet the requirements of those who would demand them in place of their pounds. When Britain thinks it has enough dollars to withstand the resulting run on the bank it will make pounds convertible, not before. When Mr. Drew says he favors convertibility he is really saying he favors world prosperity. A fine sentiment but not a policy.

* * *

Next Mr. Drew says that Canada needs larger markets in Britain—again a sound aspiration but not a policy. How does Mr. Drew propose to secure those larger markets?

Some of his followers know how to secure them. They would channel Canada's trade away from the United States and into Britain. They would curb our imports of American goods by tariffs or other restrictions and compel us to buy British goods.

This, of course, would mean, first, that we would pay more for our imports since we already buy British goods when they are competitive in price; we not only refuse to put any special barriers in the way of British goods but give many of them a tariff preference.

Secondly, if we discriminate against American goods in favor of more expensive British goods the United States will instantly retaliate by reducing its purchases here. Our American market will shrink and these disastrous losses (hitting especially the industries of British Columbia) cannot be recouped by any possible expansion in our sales overseas.

So far Mr. Drew has been exceedingly cagey about all this. He has talked about convertibility and the need for larger British markets but he has not come out openly, as his predecessor, Lord Bennett did, for a policy of discrimination against the United States. He has not come out openly for anything except prosperity.

He cannot have it both ways. Either he favors the present Canadian policy of maximum trade, on an equal basis with any nation which cares to trade with us, or he favors a policy of trade restricted to narrow channels, with the consequent damage to our American and other non-sterling markets. It is surely time for him to tell the public which side he stands on.

Again, Mr. Drew demands that Canada restrict its export of raw materials. On that point at least he is clear. He would compel producers of raw materials to manufacture them here in Canada.

What they would do with the goods thus manufactured he does not explain. Does Mr. Drew imagine that the producers of Canada are so insane that they export raw materials for the fun of it when they could profitably manufacture them here? If they could be manufactured here and sold that would be done at once to increase the profits of the producers. In fact, we cannot absorb all such goods in Canada and we cannot sell them at competitive prices in other markets.

Mr. Drew says rather vaguely that he does not favor high tariffs. But if we are to manufacture all our raw materials at home we must try to use as many of those manufactures ourselves as possible. We cannot let them pile up, unsold, while similar goods, at lower prices, are imported. We shall have to restrict the importation not only of American but of British goods when they compete with the new higher-priced goods manufactured here.

* * *

Mr. Drew's policy of restricting raw material exports leads straight into restriction of imports and makes no sense otherwise.

The restriction of imports will damage Britain's sales here and it will certainly bring retaliation from the United States, our present largest and most essential market.

Another result will follow in due course. If Canada stops exporting the raw materials which it cannot presently manufacture competively at home nations will treat us in the same way. If they cannot buy materials here they will not sell materials here. Yet the whole Canadian economy is based on gigantic imports of raw materials—coal, oil and many other things.

Let Mr. Drew observe what is happening in British Columbia today. A huge aluminum industry is being built in British Columbia and it will depend completely on the importation of a raw material called bauxite. Canada will supply nothing but the electric power.

Does Mr. Drew consider this a bad thing? If it is a good thing why is it wise to restrict the movement of raw materials throughout the world as competitive prices direct? Where would Canada be if all nations followed his policy of restricting exports and imports as well?

The trouble with this game of protectionism is that two can always play it. Both sides in the game of dog-eat-dog are impoverished in the process (not to speak of the political consequences of these quarrels). We found that out when the last Conservative government, under Lord Bennett, undertook to "blast" its way into world trade and only succeeded in worsening the great depression.

Lie Goes, the Condition Remains

MR. TRYGVE LIE LEAVES HIS post as secretary-general of the United States with a record of great and sincere service to the cause of peace.

It is absurd to say that he was biased in his opposition to Russia. The policies he opposed were not internal Russian policies but the policies of Communist aggression only.

Moreover, Mr. Lie, as secretary-general, did not act as an independent individual, but as the servant of his master, the United Nations. The Assembly studied the evidence of Korea. From that evidence it declared the Communists guilty of aggression.

The first duty, the first objective, of the United Nations was the resistance of aggression and the preservation of peace. When Mr. Lie stood four square on that basic principle, then he inevitably collided with Russia, but only because Russia showed its disregard for the primary concern of the United Nations.

Conceivably some other secretary-general may avoid the frictions and the tensions that grew up in the United Nations during Mr. Lie's protracted term in office. Yet the idea that personalities will be effective in overcoming present difficulties cannot be considered sound. The issue runs deeper.

Any other secretary who seeks to preserve the first principle of the U.N. will run foul of those who wish to ignore it. The western democracies would never consent to a secretary-general who allowed himself to be a tool of aggressors, nor is it likely that Russia will approve anyone but its own nominee.

Whoever may replace Trygve Lie, the existing tensions and pressures will continue to place the secretary-general in a position of extreme embarrassment until all members of the United Nations make good their pledge of adherence to the organization's cardinal principle—resistance to aggression no matter from what source it springs.

By DAVID BROCK

SOME of the wonders of nature amaze me less than others, I am sorry to report. A volcano, for example, impresses me a lot more than does a natural bridge. In fact, you might say that I never cross my natural bridges until I come to them.

Brock

This is wrong of me, because nature is a democracy in which all things have an equal right to amaze you. As Tennyson was aware, when he addressed the flower in the crannied wall. If he'd understood what caused the flower, he'd have known what God and man is. (It had to be "God and man is" to rhyme with crannies, but deploring his grammar won't destroy a wonderful little poem.)

But if natural bridges seem only too natural to me, I make up for this sangfroid by getting an enormous kick out of logans. I am not referring to loganberries or even to loganberry wine, neither of which is one of nature's mighty wonders. No, I mean the stones called logans . . . rocking stones so delicately balanced on a hillside or cliff that a man's hand can set them teetering. (Logan, the dictionary tells me, is Cornish for "rocking," and should be pronounced "loggan," but say it any way you want for all I care.)

I would travel immense distances to see a good logan-stone. I don't know if I'd go so far as the Argentine, where the best one weighs 700 tons and is so nicely poised that it rocks in the wind and can be used to crack walnuts. But I think my refusal to attempt this expedition is based largely on my contempt for walnuts. It certainly has nothing to do with my love for logans.

* * *

What started me off on this hymn in praise of logan-stones was an item in an English magazine. It mentioned the famous one near Land's End, in Cornwall, and said the history of this rock is too well known. It wasn't known to me, though, and I feel that in a dull and unsatisfactory world we should all share the pleasure of a story that has the three merits of being true, short, and charming. The famous stone weighs about 70 tons . . . not big enough for cracking an Argentinian walnut, maybe, but a good hefty size for anyone whose ideas and plans are smaller than those of Senor Peron. It stood on the Cornish cliff . . . or rather, it rocked on the cliff . . . in a highly satisfactory way until 1824.

In that unlucky year, Lieut. Goldsmith, Royal Navy, and his boat's crew of nine ill-led seamen, landed their boat on the beach below the cliff, climbed up to the edge, and somehow managed to push or lever the stone over the brink. It must have been great fun. They probably persuaded themselves that their fun was devoted to saving life and property. But the stone itself was property of a most unusual sort, and Lieut. Goldsmith was compelled to put it back. To replace 70 tons or rock so that it will balance as well as ever is quite a little chore, as the officer found out. It cost him £2,000. I don't know what 2,000 quid would buy you in those days . . . a great deal, naturally. But all it bought Lieut. Goldsmith was the chance to put things back where he found them. After which, he probably went round saying "Never disturb local conditions" . . . an excellent saying at all times, believe me, and not said half enough.

WITH A GRAIN OF SALT

Speaking of the big Argentinian nutcracker, I think we had better reprint a warning about eating nuts. If you will just get out your copy of "The Lady's Everyday Book; a Practical Guide in the Elegant Arts and Daily Difficulties of Domestic Life," published in London as late as 1880, I'd like you to turn to p. 212. Here we are: "Danger from Eating Nuts. Medical men advise that salt should be taken with nuts, especially when eaten at night. 'One time,' says a writer, 'while enjoying a visit from a friend, hickory nuts were served in the evening, when my friend called for salt, stating that he knew the case of a woman eating heartily of nuts in the evening, who was taken violently ill. The celebrated Dr. Abernethy was sent for, but it was after he had become too fond of his cup, and he was not in a condition to go; he muttered 'Salt, salt,' but no notice was taken. Next morning he went to this place and she was a corpse. He said if they had given her salt it would have relieved her. If they would allow him to make an examination he would convince them. On opening the stomach the nuts were found in a mass. He sprinkled salt on this and immediately it dissolved.' Nuts should never be indulged in; they are unwholesome." Well, class, I leave you to think that over between now and Christmas.

Though it does not belong to the spirit of our institutions to extend our dominion beyond the sea, positive necessity requires that we should protect our commercial interests in this remote part of the world (Bonin Islands, north of the Marianas) and in doing so, to resort to measures, however strong, to counteract the schemes of powers less scrupulous than us.

ART CRITICISM

May I answer Mr. Jan Zach's letter?

It is indeed sad a new Canadian should start with the idea of fighting Barkerism as he calls it. I can assure you, if you could instil into your pupils the peace and joy Mr. Barker gives his pupils you would indeed be fortunate. I hope as you grow older you may become more mellowed.

Mr. Barker has done more for me and many others than we will ever be able to pay him. We people who love B.C. and all the country stands for, feel sympathetic to those who cannot find joy.

No doubt the unrest in other countries has got into their blood, but it takes some years before we may become Canadians and if not satisfied there is always the alternative.

JURY SHOW

As a visitor to Victoria I visited the Art Centre there during the jury show and must say I was shocked at the works exhibited.

It appears to me that the panel of judges were biased in favor of modern art (if it can be called art), otherwise why were so many examples of that type of work shown?

Surely the judges did not think that the public would enjoy looking at works which bewildered them, works which, had they not borne titles, could never have been recognized for what they were intended to represent, and also could not be recognized through the titles given them.

People enjoy beauty and color; they like to look at paintings which please and can be appreciated, not paintings which jar the senses and bring forth a discordant feeling, such as "Greek Freighter," "Ten Mile Point" and others.

Surely no one apart from the artist(?) could have told that a "Greek Freighter" was represented by the awful conglomeration of lines and colors shown on the canvas and no one, I am sure, could have recognized "Ten Mile Point."

It is to be hoped that the Art Centre will ultimately become a centre at which showing of art will not be biased one way or the other and that art that pleases the senses and brings forth a realization of the beauty that exists in our troublesome world will be shown the public upon whom the existence of the centre depends.

WELL SAID

I am writing this letter in an attempt to express the pleasure my children had from the birthday party given by the Surplus Food Stall. They have so few pleasures they were pleased with the things given to them, the Chinese checkers have kept my young people indoors each evening playing the game with other young people who come in and thus are off the street.

We have just observed Remembrance Day for the gallant men who died for freedom and at Eastertime we keep holy the day Christ died to save a world from evil but sometimes we fail to express our appreciation to those who try to follow the teachings of the Bible by helping those in need, as Mrs. Green has tried to and those who so unselfishly help her in giving their time and labor and of their produce to distribute to those who would suffer without their help.

It is no humiliation to accept a helping hand and in return whenever possible pass it on, for here in Canada is given to us the freedom to live our lives in our own way, in fellowship and in peace with one another.

YALU PEBIL

The Korean problem has brought about a lot of serious "soul-searching" thought throughout the world.

As I see it the election of General Eisenhower will bring new hope. Here we have a man of experience in such things, also a man of action.

It probably will be necessary to drive the Russian-helped Chinese to the other side of the Yalu, as, up to now, they have not shown a real desire to settle the Korean question.

One thing I am sure of, Eisenhower will stop the Chinese and Russian double talk and take whatever action may be necessary to settle the issue and give to the whole of Korea the self-determination it deserves.

QUESTIONS EXPENDITURE

Please allow me to refer to two (separate) news items in your issue of November 6.

1. On the front page: "Charities must face cuts." You report that the Community Chest's recent campaign netted an amount which is approximately $50,000 short of its objective. It was estimated that the charitable agencies may have to cut services by about 35 per cent.

2. On page 5 another news item implies that it is proposed to spend a further $750,000 to complete Christ Church Cathedral.

Whilst to many of your readers there may not be any obvious relationship between these two items, others may be wondering whether the people of this city, or at least some of them, want a multi-million dollar cathedral, and at the same time are content to leave the charitable services included in the Community Chest (which after all might be considered to be applied Christianity) at only two-thirds of sufficiency.

What would the founder of Christianity say to the people of Victoria in this connection?

Clarifies Stand On Inflation

I have just returned from a seven-weeks visit to Western Canada. My secretary drew to my attention an editorial which appeared in your paper on September 29 last, under the caption, "Mr. Low and the unrevealed mystery."

I have read the same with care and, although this is a late hour to be doing so, I feel that it would only be simple justice to ask you to give this letter prominence in your newspaper, because some mischievous reporter or editorial writer has completely misrepresented what I said in the course of my address at Crystal Garden in Victoria on Thursday night, September 25.

I did not say at any time, "that the only way to get around inflation is to make gifts to the people of purchasing power." If such a report of my address was written by any reporter who was present at the meeting, then I can only say that he was either deaf in both ears or determined deliberately to misrepresent what I said. I would not like to think that any newspaper reporter would be so mischievous as to be guilty of the latter; and if his excuse is the fact that he is deaf in both ears, he shouldn't be a reporter.

* * *

The only reference which I made to gifts of purchasing power to the people, was made in reference to what had happened over the years since Social Credit began its educational work in 1935. I stated that from 1935 until 1940 the Social Credit movement had consistently advocated gifts of purchasing power to the Canadian people as a means of balancing consumption with production, inasmuch as during those years our country was suffering from under-consumption and great surpluses of production that could not find a satisfactory market.

I further stated that from 1940 to 1945 the Social Credit movement strongly advocated that the government of Canada prepare a policy for stabilizing the Canadian economy after the war was over and at which time the top one-third of our production would not be drained off to be given as gifts to our enemies in the form of bombs, guns, shells, etc. We proposed that for the peacetime, the government of Canada should make gifts of purchasing power to the Canadian people and thereby stabilize the economy to the extent that such gifts help to balance consumption with production and prevent the piling up of unsaleable surpluses of goods.

We were called a bunch of fools for making such a proposition. However, when the Liberals faced the prospect of an election in 1945, they put through parliament the Family Allowances Act and provided through the provisions of that bill, to give gifts of purchasing power to every Canadian family every month of the year thereafter. I distinctly emphasized that what the Liberals had done was simply to concede that Social Credit had been right all the time and that they had been wrong in calling us a bunch of fools and nitwits. This is the only reference that was made in my whole speech, to gifts of purchasing power.

* * *

When I was approached by newspapermen here in Ottawa four years ago and asked about our party's stand on inflation and high prices, these are the words which I used in my reply: "Our first point of attack would be to remove every possible restriction to optimum production, for only by increasing production can we balance the supply of goods with the supply of purchasing power. The only real wealth is in production. Policies of plenty raise the standard of living, whereas policies of scarcity only depress the standard of living. What we need more than anything else now and in the years immediately ahead, is all-out productive effort."

From the above it is perfectly clear that your editorials were written in complete ignorance of what I did say. I think it will be only just and fair to give this letter as much prominence as you gave your editorial.

Thanking you for your courtesy and for the valuable space in your paper.

Ups and Downs

By BRIAN TOBIN

"IT'S funny," said the Elevator Man, "what lasts and what doesn't. So often it's something comparatively worthless, some trivial thing of no use to anybody. Take memories, for instance. Maybe your earliest memories are of something important. But chances are they're more likely to be a glimpse of a doorway in your early home, being dressed to go out somewhere (you can't remember where), or hearing someone say something about a big storm (you can't remember the storm). A thousand great and vital things were going on in the world all the time. But in your long-term memory it all boils down to the sound of a train whistle, eating a sandwich on a beach, or standing somewhere in a great crowd, its purpose forgotten. If our lives were judged by what we recall of them most of us would have to admit to a pretty dull existence. Going down!

Tobin

"It's the same," said the Elevator Man, "with other things. Stupid little things so often survive while big things perish. I see where that British atom bomb test blew up a ship and everything for miles around. But the experts found several cans of beer untouched when they went ashore after the blast. In the London blitz a whole building was blown down except for one wall. And high on the wall, about the third story, hung a raincoat on a hook. A home was demolished by a blockbuster, but a vase of paper flowers was left undamaged on a mantelpiece. Lower main!

"It seems foolish," said the Elevator Man, "but there's hope in it too. Because if the unworthy things of the world survive when better things go, there's a chance for mankind after all. We'll live on, with the cans of beer, the raincoats and paper flowers, proof that good fortune is as valuable a thing to possess as good sense; that life is, after all, not a reward but a gift."

Feller's Suicide Leap Will Not Halt Probe

U.S. Senate Committee to Continue Investigation of U.N. Employees

NEW YORK, Nov. 14 (UP)—The Senate internal security subcommittee promised no let-up today in its investigation of American employees in the United Nations despite protests over the suicide leap of the U.N.'s top legal adviser.

Three members of the subcommittee said they "fully intend" to continue their investigation of possible Communist influence among American employees of the U.N.

Abraham H. Feller, 47, general counsel and acting assistant secretary-general for legal affairs in the U.N., leaped to his death Thursday from his 12th floor apartment in Manhattan. His friends and associates in the U.N. blamed his death on a nervous breakdown caused by the subcommittee's attacks on loyalty of U.N. personnel.

Secretary General Trygve Lie said Feller had been under "a prolonged and serious strain" in trying to uphold due process of law against "indiscriminate smears and exaggerated charges."

"The terrible tragedy of his death is the result," Lie said.

Lie's remarks were denounced as "irresponsible" by three members of the internal security subcommittee in a statement issued through the subcommittee's special counsel, Robert Morris.

"Although the investigation is barely under way we have seen a parade of United Nations officials refuse to deny membership in the Communist party and in some cases refuse to answer whether they have been involved in espionage against this country," they said.

". . . We fully intend to continue our investigation in the interest of the security of the United States."

Morris said the statement represented the views of Sens. James Eastland (D.-Miss.), Homer Ferguson (R.-Mich) and Willis Smith (D.-N.C.).

Sen. Pat McCarran (D.-Nev.), chairman of the subcommittee, sailed for South America after commenting that if Feller's "conscience was clear he had no reason to suffer from what he expected of our committee." He added that "anything I say" doesn't "mean to imply he has done anything wrong."

The subcommittee Thursday recessed its investigation until January.

C.N.R. Leaves It to Board To Find Money

Freight Rate Lawyers Exchange Sharp Words

OTTAWA, Nov. 14 (CP)—In a hot exchange between opposing freight-rate lawyers, the Canadian National Railways told the Board of Transport Commissioners today it is neither supporting nor objecting to a Canadian Pacific Railway plan for a radical change in the system of setting rates.

Lawyers for provincial governments opposing the move, attempting to pin down the C.N.R. to a definite stand, accused the publicly-owned line of "shilly-shallying" and "evading and avoiding" the issue.

The 10-minute tussle between the railway and provincial counsel wound up with the C.N.R. telling the board it needs money to run its system and it leaves it to the board to decide how that money will be raised.

Saskatchewan Counsel M. A. MacPherson called on the C.N.R. for "clarification" of its attitude during the course of C.P.R. evidence on the railway application for a system that would base rail charges on specified earnings to be allowed the C.P.R. in its net rail investment. At present, rates are authorized on the basis of the C.P.R.'s current financial needs.

As sought by the C.P.R., the proposed method would result in sizeable freight rate increases.

Originally, the C.N.R. concurred in the principle of the C.P.R.'s application but did not associate itself with the specific investment figures and rate of return asked by the privately-owned company. It is not presenting evidence at the hearings.

Mr. MacPherson said today the C.P.R.-proposed plan would bring rate increases larger than any in the post-war series, and it was important to know the attitude of the Canadian National on behalf of the "forgotten man"—the freight payer.

Hugh O'Donnell, C.N.R. counsel, replied the government company has no objection if the board considers necessary a "study" of the Canadian Pacific's proposals.

"We are not asking for it," he said. "The board is free to adopt it or any other method."

That was not good enough, Mr. MacPherson retorted. He wanted a "yes or no" answer.

"We stand for just and reasonable rates on any basis the board may choose to fix," Mr. O'Donnell replied. We say the board will have to use its own discretion. The C.P.R. is entitled to have a rate base and rate of return if the board sees fit to grant it."

Alberta counsel J. J. Frawley joined the demand for a more definite statement from the C.N.R., accusing it of "shilly-shallying."

"Let the C.N.R. declare itself," he challenged.

Attlee Makes New Move to Block Bevan

LONDON, Nov. 14 (Reuters).—An old trade union device for thwarting Communists was brought out today to cut leftist Aneurin Bevan's hopes of gaining heavy representation on the Labor party's first team in parliament.

Party leader Clement Attlee ordered two separate elections next Wednesday for the 12 front-bench seats to be occupied by the Socialists "shadow cabinet."

Normally, the seats go to the men with the highest number of votes from the Labor members of parliament. Under the new system, only candidates gaining more than 50 per cent of the votes in the first ballot will be elected. The second vote to fill the remaining seats will also be on the majority principle.

Since Bevan can hope for only about 80 of the 295 total votes for himself and his picked candidates, he might not get a single man elected. This is the tried strategy employed by labor leaders to keep Communist minorities from seizing control of their unions.

'Objectivity' Of U.S. Press Criticized

BOSTON, Nov. 14 (AP)—A legal authority today criticized the United States press for publishing "defamatory" statements made under congressional immunity without adding information to help readers evaluate the charges.

Prof. Zechariah Chafee, Jr., Harvard law school professor and noted critic of the press, told the annual meeting of the Associated Press Managing Editors' Association: "The constant repetition of defamatory statements about American citizens by newspapers who suspect with good reason that these statements are largely untrue is not a performance of which the press can be proud."

Chafee was a member of the commission of the freedom of the press which in 1947 published a critical analysis of the U.S. press entitled "A Free and Responsible Press."

He declared that facts "should be given meaning" by newspapers.

"Sometimes a fact is accurately printed," he said, "and yet it leaves an altogether incorrect impression on the reader unless its significance is evaluated at the time it is printed.

Chafee said that when the press already has information about a charge "or could easily obtain such information, a few additional sentences on that point would be of great value to its readers."

CITY PHONE RATE SAID TOO COSTLY

Ald. Skilling Charges Victoria Paying Highest Rate, for Size, in West Canada

Ald. Waldo Skillings told city council meeting Thursday Victoria now is paying from 90 cents to $1.40 more for individual residence phones than Calgary, Edmonton or Regina.

He stated Victoria is paying higher rates than any other city of comparable size in western provinces.

In a list of comparative rates, Victoria was shown to be paying $4.15 at present, with $4.65 proposed, on residence telephones.

A wall phone in Calgary is $3.25 and a desk phone $3.50. In Edmonton a wall phone is $2.75 and a desk phone $3. In Regina the rate is $2.75.

Calgary, he said, has neither two-party nor multi-party service.

On individual business phones Victoria pays $8.40 and the proposed new rate is $9.80.

Calgary pays $6.25 for a wall phone and $6.50 for a desk phone. Edmonton pays $6.50 for a wall phone and $6.75 for a desk phone. Regina pays $4.75.

"Calgary has had no rate increase since 1926 but Victoria has had four," said Ald. Skillings.

Rates quoted were those of the Alberta Government Telephones and Saskatchewan Government Telephones.

Bus Company, Drivers Up for Conciliation

VANCOUVER, Nov. 14 (BUP)—The wage dispute between the Pacific Stages Limited and its 200 drivers, members of the A.F. of L. Street Railwaymen's Union, was expected today to go before a conciliation board shortly.

The men want a 20½-cent hourly wage increase to add to their current $1.51 pay. The company has said it cannot meet the request.

FREE FOOD STALL'S OPERATOR JUBILANT OVER GIFT OF $100

There's another $100 in the kitty for Mrs. Barbara Green's free food stall in the Public Market.

Mrs. Green was jubilant today when she announced the gift.

"It wasn't anonymous," she said. "But the donor didn't want the name disclosed."

She is opening the food stall Saturday and she would welcome donations of food or funds. If anyone has donations which they cannot deliver, Mrs. Green asks them to telephone G 3720.

Mrs. Green will open the stall Dec. 20, too, and hopes to have enough material for a January and February distribution.

"Those are bad months," she said.

She has held back a certain amount of canned and bottled goods, Mrs. Green says, for winter stalls.

"But we always need more," she adds.

SPECTACULAR FIREDOME V-8 PERFORMANCE

Get set for the driving thrill of your life . . . with the spectacular new FireDome V-8 engine. Never before such flashing getaway, such record-breaking performance, such amazing efficiency.

Secret of the FireDome engine's tremendous power and efficiency is its hemispherical or "dome-shaped" combustion chamber. This design makes it possible to convert fuel energy into driving power much more efficiently. There's less loss of heat energy through the surface of the chamber—more is converted into power. Quicker, more thorough combustion results from shorter flame travel. Result—an efficient, economical 160 h.p. you have to drive to appreciate.

FULL POWER STEERING

With DeSoto Full Power Steering all the work involved in steering is virtually eliminated; parking becomes absurdly simple, instead of being a chore; there's no sign of wheel fight on rough roads; all handling is easier. Available on the DeSoto FireDome V-8 as extra equipment.

FLUID TORQUE DRIVE

For "sprinter" starts and even finer low-speed performance, Fluid Torque Drive is available on the FireDome Eight as extra equipment. It more than doubles the turning power of the engine at speeds up to 45 m.p.h.

ON THE COLLEGE SCENE — By GEOFF CONWAY

Hyde-Lay Spends Short Visit

Two weakened college rugby XV's will be taking to the field Saturday against powerful opponents.

The first division squad will be minus the services of Crimson Tide coach Derek Hyde-Lay. He has announced that due to the fact that he has accepted a teaching position at University School he will have to devote his time to coaching their entry in the second division league and will be unable to play for Vic College, as originally planned.

Also there is a chance that starry Walt Young will not be at his regular inside position due to an ankle injury incurred last week.

The second division team is journeying to Shawnigan Lake Saturday to play that school in a match that will decide second position in the league race.

Injuries have depleted the club's strength but a good showing is expected as some new talent has been turning out to practices.

* * *

The Badminton club has completed playoffs for positions on the two teams they are entering in the Lower Vancouver Island Badminton League. Both squads play their opening matches this week.

Those who won positions on the first team which plays Civil Service in the third division at Sir James Douglas School tonight are Frances Appleton, Janet Parsons, Sally Pollord, Prylis Rose, Ron Birch, Geoff Conway, George Forbes and Ron Karadimas.

* * *

The fourth division squad will consist of eight players picked in rotation from Val Potter, Liz Creery, Elizabeth McCallum, Belinda McConnell, Danny Francis, Ted Horsey, John Pritchard, Bill Branson, Mike Price, Don Rapanos and Blane Coulcher.

The third division entry will compete in two games before Christmas and two after while the latter will have two contests before and four after Christmas.

Mark Bell was crowned college golf champion last week when he downed Brian Holmes 4 and 2 in their 18-hole playoff.

'BIRDS LOSE ON FIELD, BUT WIN AT BOX OFFICE

VANCOUVER, Nov. 14 (CP)—U.B.C.'s footballing Thunderbirds—consistent losers on the field—are sure-fire at the gate.

Despite a string of seven straight losses in Evergreen Conference play, the 'Birds expect to clear $1,000 on five home games.

Campus athletic director Dick Penn said financially it was the team's best showing for some years and would be $800 better than last season.

Argo Coach Confident On Eve of Grid Final

TORONTO, Nov. 14 (BUP)—Coach Frank Clair predicted today that only his Toronto Argonauts' own mistakes could beat them in Saturday's opener of the two-game total-points Big Four championships with the Hamilton Tiger Cats.

Clair, although sure now the Argos would be missing the services of double-threat Ted Toogood, was happy about his replacements. Jack Gray will handle Toogood's offensive duties, while Royal Copeland and Johnny Fedosoff will split the offensive at right halfback.

Toogood, nursing a wrenched ankle, might not be in shape even for the second game at Toronto Nov. 19. But Clair didn't feel his absence could endanger Argonauts' hopes of an eastern championship berth against the winner in O.R.F.U. playoffs.

"I believe the only thing that can beat us is our own mistakes," he said. "We made too many in losing to Alouettes last week, and I can't see that happening again.

These shining predictions weren't echoed in the Tiger Cat camp, where coach Carl Voyles told a quarterback club meeting: "We looked bad in practice last night. I hope we are not in the same condition Saturday."

Mackay Breaks Hand

VERNON, Nov. 14 (BUP).—playing coach Dave Mackay of the Vernon Canadiens of the Okanagan Senior Hockey League joined three other mates on the sidelines today with injuries.

Mackay suffered a broken hand in a game against Penticton Tuesday night. Club physician Dr. Hugh Alexander said Mackay would be out of the lineup for at least six weeks.

Walls Scores Kayo, Seeks Charles Bout

VANCOUVER, Nov. 14 (BUP)—Canadian heavyweight champion Earl Walls—aiming for a possible bout with former world champion Ezzard Charles—spotted George Parmentier of Eureka, California, 43 pounds, then scored a technical knockout at 30 seconds of the second round in their no-title bout at Vancouver Thursday night.

Walls weighed 191 to Parmentier's 234.

Promoter Jack Berry of Edmonton—where Walls won several fights—had earlier said he would try to match the Windsor, Ont., native with Charles if Walls made a good showing in Thursday's bout. Berry says he has received official word from Jack Mintz, Charles' manager, that Jack Laken of Pittsburgh has been sanctioned to discuss the bout.

Berry says he will probably open contract discussions next week when Laken arrives in Edmonton to handle "Baby Face" Jones of Detroit in a bout against George Dunn on Thursday.

Walls got to work early, sending Parmentier to the canvas for a four-count in the first round of their scheduled 10-round set-to. Parmentier, with little defense, was an easy target for the fast-stepping champion.

Max Baer, former world heavyweight champion who refereed the bout, stopped the fight at the 30-second mark of round two when it became apparent Parmentier could not continue to absorb the punishment.

Weather Affects Minor Soccer Card

The Lower Island Junior and Juvenile Football Association will be allowed to hold only one game each week-end on the two fields at Central Park, association secretary Jimmy Allen announced Thursday.

Parks Board officials told Allen that weather conditions will allow only one game a week on the soggy fields.

Only one game is affected by the change, that is the fifth division contest between Black and White Taxi and St. Louis College on Saturday. The game will be played at Upper Beacon Hill at 1 p.m.

It looks as though Pacific Coast junior heavyweight wrestling champion Roger Mackay (on bottom) has world light-heavyweight champion Andy Tremaine in a bit of a headlock. However, the grimacing look on Tremaine's face is caused by unwillingness of Mackay's arm to snap off at the shoulder as the champ applies more pressure. Tremaine won from Mackay in the main event of the opening mat card of the season before 700 fans at the Victoria Ballroom Thursday night. (Times photo by Irving Strickland.)

Leafs Take N.H.L. Lead; Hawks Trounce Rangers

Red Wings Flash Form To Blank Boston Bruins

Conn Smythe's Toronto Maple Leafs, slow with their A B C's at the start of the National Hockey League season, have moved to the head of the class.

It took some steady driving the last couple of weeks, but with their 3-1 victory over Montreal Canadiens Tuesday night the Leafs took over first place from the Montrealers by one point.

The league shuffle wasn't confined to Montreal. In Chicago Sid Abel's Black Hawks, bogged down by a three-game losing streak, came up with a 6-2 win over the luckless New York Rangers and slid into a second-place tie with the Canadiens.

And in Detroit the Red Wings showed some of last year's championship form by shutting out Boston Bruins 3-0.

The victory sent the Wings one point ahead of the Bruins into fourth position with 15 points.

Loose defensive work and a badly-organized offensive led to Montreal's defeat. The Leafs concentrated on close checking.

Harry Watson opened Leafs' scoring in the second period, deflecting home Jimmy Thomson's blue-line shot. Forty seconds later Bert Olmstead sank a hard backhander for Montreal's only goal. Ted Kennedy slammed home a pass from Ron Stewart and then assisted on the final goal by Stewart.

FLY WHILE SHORT

In Chicago Stadium the Rangers opened strongly when Eddie Kullman hit the nets but the Hawks, a man short, slammed home two goals. The first was made by George Gee. Less than a minute later Gee flicked the puck over to Gus Bodnar who flashed the light.

In the second period Hawks increased their lead on three quick goals by Jim Peters, Doc Couture and Gus Mortson. The Rangers replied with only a single, by Nick Mickoski. Hawks filled up the scoring sheet in the third with one by young Pete Conacher.

Terry Sawchuk rang up his second shut-out of the season by turning back the Bruins at Detroit. But more impressive was the work of Ted Lindsay and Gordie Howe. Lindsay scored twice and assisted on another goal, while Howe was credited with two assists. By gathering up these points the two wingers moved into a tie with Maurice (Rocket) Richard of Montreal for the scoring lead. All have 17 points.

GRID FINAL SATURDAY

Esks Did It--- Can Cadets?

The obvious forecast for Saturday's Junior Canadian Football League final between Royal Roads and Vampires is: Edmonton did it, why can't the cadets?

Frankie Filchock's fabulous Eskies faced a 19-point deficit in their western semifinal with Calgary Stampeders and now the Esks are making reservations for a Grey Cup trip to Toronto.

As a result of Tuesday's two-game total-point series opener here—a smashing 16-6 victory by Vampires—the cadets are faced with the problem of making up 10 points to get back on even terms with Ray Mitchell's suddenly inspired squad.

But even down 10 points, Vampires and local experts still show a great deal of respect for Royal Roads' heavy line, fast back field and savage blocking.

Cadet coach Flt. Lieut. Frank Campbell said Thursday that his team was tired from two tough games in four days but that they would be "up" for Saturday's all-important game. He said the backfield would be depleted due to injuries to backfielders Jack Folkins and White, both of whom are hobbled by badly injured ankles.

He went on to say that he hoped for a dry day as the cadets' explosive backs were kept down by the slow field Tuesday.

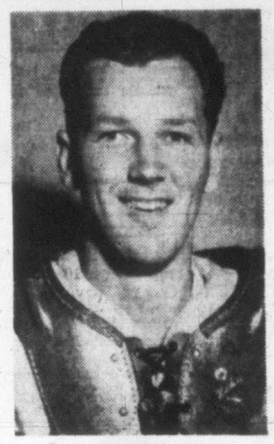

TO USE RUBBER BALL

With respect to the weather, league president Phil Lee said Thursday that a rubber ball would be used throughout the entire game Saturday, rain or shine. There was some dispute Tuesday when a rubber ball was substituted for the soggy leather ball in the third quarter.

Vampires will be without the playing services of coach Ray Mitchell, who suffered a broken blood vessel in his leg while catching a pass for Vampires' first touchdown. However, Mitchell said Thursday "The way the boys feel now, they don't need an old man like me."

A doubtful starter is halfback Tommy Elmwood, who is nursing a recurrent ankle sprain.

Game time at Heywood Avenue Park is 2.

LARRY BROWNLEE . . . Vampire lineman.

McMorran's Cage Teams to Travel

McMorran's juvenile girls and juvenile boys will journey to Cowichan Lake to play the up-Island basketball squads in exhibition contests tonight.

A bantam contest will open the three-game card, starting at 7 p.m.

In their last outing Thursday, McMorran's juvenile boys trounced Sooke 44-19.

Sooke led 17-15 at the half. However the Pavilion boys held them to one basket in the final half to rack up the one-sided victory in a Saanich and Suburban League game.

GAME RESCHEDULED

CHICAGO, Nov. 14 (AP)—Chicago Black Hawks have announced their National Hockey League game with Detroit Red Wings scheduled here Nov. 4, but canceled because it was election night, has been rescheduled for Dec. 6, at Indianapolis.

Patrick May Beat Day To the Punch Tonight

'DIZ' STANDS UP FOR TERRY, NOT FOR EDDIE

MEMPHIS, Nov. 14 (BUP)—Dizzy Dean, the voluble ex-Cardinal pitcher, today got his word in about the latest administrative shake-up in the St. Louis National League club.

"The Cards should be ashamed of firing Terry Moore," Dean said while on a brief stopover at Memphis en route to his home in Dallas.

The Cards announced earlier that Moore had been granted a "leave," but Moore said flatly that he was fired.

"Anybody that says there's anything wrong with Terry has something wrong with them," Dean said, "and that goes for Eddie Stanky, too.

Maple Leaf Official to See Cats Play

BY BILL WALKER

Clarence "Happy Day," assistant general manager of the Toronto Maple Leafs, apparently has a problem.

But whether that problem coincides with, or is as serious as the one facing his host of today, is another matter that may, or may not, be decided tonight.

Day, reportedly on a scouting trip to find players "who can put the puck in the net," will be a guest of owner Lester Patrick of the Cougars at tonight's Western Hockey League game at Memorial Arena, between the Cougars and Tacoma Rockets.

Patrick, on the other hand, may be asking Day for the same type of player.

"The Leafs," says Cougar general manager Fred Hutchinson, "have a commitment to try and help the Cougars."

Undoubtedly this point will be discussed as the Leafs' problem does not appear as serious as the Cougars'.

Thursday night the Leafs took over first place in the N.H.L. Tonight the Cougars will be seeking to break a record of questionable performance that has seen them win but one of their last nine games.

Also, the deadline draws nigh for the future welfare of three of the 17 men on the club roster.

By Saturday night the club must get down to the league player limit to 14 men, excluding goalkeepers.

"We must remove three players," admits Hutchinson, "either by release, sale or trade. But right now I don't know who they will be."

Pleasing news is the fact that left winger Colin Kilburn is due to return to action. That is if the club medico gives Kilburn and his sprained ankle the green light today.

Game time is 8.30.

TREMAINE WINS

Wrestling's Answer to Mr. Hyde

Andy Tremaine is a wrestling example of Jekyll and Hyde, if there ever was one.

If it weren't for the game's trade mark, "the cauliflower ear," one could easily mistake him for a farmer or rancher, but once in the ring, there is no doubt that he is the world's light heavyweight champion.

Tremaine won the main event of Thursday's opening mat card of the year from Pacific Coast junior heavyweight champion Roger Mackay in one of the most rough and tumble bouts since Con Bruno was in town last year.

Tremaine won the first fall after softening up Mackay with a punishing headlock. Mackay caught the champion with a wrist-lock to take the second fall.

Tremaine wiggled out of another wrist-lock to come back and pin his opponent for the deciding fall.

GALLAGHER UNCHANGED

In the semi-main event, that shady old fellow, Doc Gallagher won from Arturo Cosenza with a pair of hangman's holds which nearly put Cosenza out for the night.

Wily Gallagher, who has more tricks up his sleeve than Carter has pills, started off as the perfect gentleman until Cosenza became a little too spry, thus the need of the hangman's noose.

Buddy Curtis won from Bud Retell in the special event opener.

Promoter Ken Williamson will present his second card next Thursday at the Victoria Ballroom at 8:30.

Shuttle Meet Reaches Semis

Semi-finals in all events of the Victoria Lawn Tennis and Badminton Club's shuttle tournament will be completed tonight.

All players are requested to report to the starter tonight before leaving.

Tonight's draw follows:

Milligan Returns to United for City Match

Victoria United willl be bolstered by the return of playing coach Wally Milligan, who will be back at centre forward Saturday when United meets Vancouver City in a crucial Coast Soccer League game at Athletic Park at 2.30.

Milligan has seen little service in the last four weeks as a result of a recurring leg injury. However he attended workout Thursday night and announced the leg was fit enough for him to start Saturday.

Milligan will pivot the forward line with versatile Cedric Robb, a winger who has been filling in at centre for Milligan, moving to inside right. Tim Walker will be at right wing, Alex Stewart at left wing and Ray Wilkinson at inside left.

The defense has Harry Carruthers, Den McGee and Jack Robbins at halfbacks and Joe Robbins and Bill Hope at fullbacks, fronting goalie Bill McAllister.

Bernie Clarkson, Glen Robbins, Murray Speller and Erwin Michalski are spares.

Frank McMurray will be in goal for Vancouver with Norm Guistini and George Bagdonovich at right and left halfback. Joe Jordon pivots Roy Winton and Ernie Durante on the halfback line and the forward unit is made up of wings Tom McHugh and Denny Rogers, insides Stan Bob and Brian Philley and centre forward John Letson.

Reserves are Doug Jesperson, Ken Harrison, Larry Crema and Charlie Lavery.

The United Booster Club will present prizes to club members holding lucky membership cards. Prizes include an electric iron, toaster, scrips and passes to the next home game.

Saturday at Windsor Park, Civil Service will meet Canadian Scottish while Esquimalt and Victoria West battle it out Sunday at lower Beacon Hill Park Sunday. Both games start at 2.30.

The winner between Civil Service and Scottish will advance directly to the cup finals. Winner of the Esquimalt-Wests game meets Adanacs in the cup semifinal to decide the other finalist.

All proceeds from the annual series are given to the injured players' fund.

Vic High Runners to Enter P.N.W. Event

Victoria High School will send a seven-man team to the fifth annual Pacific Northwest cross-country championships on November 22 at U.B.C.'s stadium in Vancouver.

This meet is the biggest undertaking for the city pavement-pounders and they will be the only high school ever to compete in the championship.

At least seven other teams will take part in the two and one-half mile event for juniors under 20.

University of Oregon won the meet last year. To date this year entries have been received from Washington, Washington State, Western Washington, Whitman, Lewis and Clark and U.B.C.

Last year's winner, W. Reiser of Oregan will be on hand to defend his title.

Victoria High will place an eight-man team in the annual Royal Roads invitational cross-country championship with the Vancouver Island title at stake on the following Wednesday, Nov. 26.

The Fernwood Street school's Pete Kirchner won the race last year but the team as a whole placed second. Victoria High placed eight runners in the first 10 in an exhibition race against the Cadets earlier this year.

Cadets have won the team event of the grueling race since its inauguration.

Bucceroni Narrow Choice

NEW YORK, Nov. 14 (UP)—Danny Nardico, Purple-Hearted ex-marine, will seek his 10th straight victory and a shot at the light-heavyweight crown tonight when he meets dangerous Dan Bucceroni in a television 10-rounder at Madison Square Garden.

Despite his winnig streak, Nardico of Tampa, Fla., is an underdog in the betting as he goes into this slugfest between two aggressive knockout specialists.

Bucceroni, the Philadelphia butcher boy, was favored at 8-5 although he took the match as a substitute for ex-middleweight champion Jake LaMotta, who suffered a virus infection.

Matthews to Meet Williams

LONDON, Nov. 14 (BUP.—Promoter Jack Solomons Thursday confirmed that heavyweight Harry Matthews of Seattle has been signed to meet British and British Empire heavyweight champion Johnny Williams in a 10-round bout at Harringay Arena Dec. 10.

Solomons said former world heavyweight champion Ezzard Charles had been approached to meet Williams but had demanded a bigger purse than could be realized at Harringay Arena.

Reject Proposal

CHICAGO, Nov. 14 (AP)—The Professional Golfers' Association Wednesday rejected by a 46-to-7 vote a proposal to modify the match-play system of the national P.G.A. tourney.

The proposal had called for 72 holes of medal play to produce a match-play championship field of the 15 low scorers and the defending champion.

RAGS TO RICHES STORY OF A JOCKEY

Tony Makes Bum of Horatio

NEW YORK, Nov. 14 (UP).—Tiny Tony Despirito is making a bum out of Horatio Alger.

Horatio, you'll remember if you go back as far as the model T Ford, was the rags-to-riches dreamer of literary bridge. His never-varied theme concerned the honest, hard-working hero who always overcame all obstacles to wind up with the lady and the loot.

But it ever was a long, agonizing struggle before justice was joyously triumphant.

Tony, the nation's leading jockey, is doing in one chapter everything Horatio did in a whole book. And it has all the frills, too.

For instance, this undersized son of a poor textile mill worker was grounded twice early this year for riding "incompetency."

As of today, the Massachusetts midget has ridden 342 winners. If he rides 43 more in 41 remaining racing days—and who's to say he won't—he'll break the all-time record of 388 winners in one year.

Tony's story follows the Alger script closely. As a youngster he was so small the other kids called him "runt" and wouldn't let him play their games. So Tony wandered the eight miles to Rockingham Park and three years ago, at 14, started walking "hots."

"I just had to be a jockey," he recalls quietly. "I was too small for other sports and I didn't mean to work in the mills."

Finally, late last year, he got his first chance to ride and was grounded immediately for being incompetent. He stayed aboard the horse but was about as helpful as a case of the hives.

On Jan. 22, little Tony finally got a mount on something called Great Shuffle, and it was. The race was at Sunshine Park, a goat track in the palmetto scrub of West Florida. Tony won the race, his first victory, but his performance was too much for the purple-faced stewards and he was set down again.

After recovering their composure, they told Tony to give up the game.

"You'll never be a jockey," he was advised. "You might kill yourself—or everybody else on the track."

Big-eyed Tony didn't know that such riders as Eddie Arcaro and Joe Culmone had been given the same advice when they were apprentices. He just kept trying to learn and, when he got another chance, started making good in a big way.

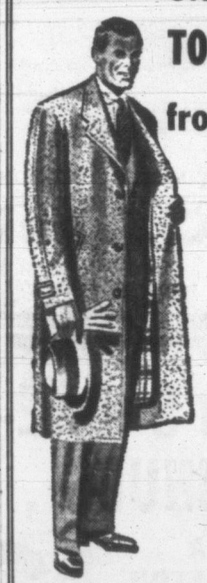

How good won't be known until the end of the year. But up to right now he's slightly more than sensational. He has ridden six winners in one day and is the eighth jock in 57 years to ride more than 300 winners in one year—putting him in the exclusive class with Walter Miller, Vince Powers, Jackie Westrope, Johnny Longden, Culmone, Willie Shoemaker and Charlie Burr.

"Just lucky, I guess," Tony sums it up.

If he gets any luckier, the 388 record held by Miller, Culmore and Shoemaker is due to be wiped off the books.

Tony, meanwhile, has all the Alger attributes. He's modest, kind to his folks and successful. Horatio at his finest never matched this kid.

On the OUTDOOR FRONT

By ROY THORSEN

Hunters Bill Bridgewood and Chuck Staples of Victoria and Langford's cougar-killer Jimmy Paton were badly in need of a detective to solve their problem after last week's hunting expedition to Sayward Forest, north of Campbell River.

Jimmy bagged a big buck. The antlered specimen was securely tied in a trailer towed by the party's car and the trio were practically drooling in anticipation of vension steaks when they got home.

Thorsen

But 80 miles closer to home the party stopped to have a little "refreshment" and then discovered that their prize had disappeared from the trailer.

They retraced their route looking for it off the side of the highway but couldn't find it and returned home a disgruntled group.

(It's just too bad that Bridgewood went on a hunting trip without his usual partner, John (Chief of Police Blackstock). Whether the chief's long experience as a policeman would have solved the mystery of the missing deer, we can't say, but at least it would have been a good idea to have had him along as a chaperone).

★ ★ ★

The hunting and the fishing picture at the present time is: Ducks still spotty (and the only targets left for nimrods) trout fishing, fair throughout the island; lots of grilse (big ones) in Saanich Inlet if you want to try for them.

Some fishing folk, though, say they have had a tough time to catch the little silvers, in spite of their large numbers. But a lot of other anglers are taking limits.

★ ★ ★

The champion buck deer hunter of Vancouver Island this year is Lake Cowichan's Ray C. Brunt. He registered a 180-pound antlered speeimen to win the mammoth trophy in the annual island Sylvester U-Drive buck deer competition. Jack Robbins, manager of the firm, is away on holidays at the present time, but will announce the entire prize list early next week.

The competition attracted a near-record entry.

Other entrants were: Angus Murcheson, R.R.1 Victoria, 170 lbs., 8 ozs.; W. D. Payne, 1912 Shotbolt, 163 lbs; P. D. Bowe, 3143 Wascanna, 131 lbs.; Richard L. Creed, 1175 Burnside, 135 lbs.; Gordon Brooks, 3280 Douglas, 130 lbs.; Charles Godber, 620 Angus, 152 lbs.; Rod Graff, 1613 Belmont, 90 lbs.; Bernie Linskill, 1010 Balmoral, 153 lbs., 8 ozs.; Roy Burley, 126 Lurline, 121 lbs.; R. S. Hill, 824 Ellery, 87 lbs.; F. Bodenchuk, 218 Cross, 103 lbs.

M. R. Corner, 164 Sims, 88 lbs.; L. G. Smith, 1718 Haultain, 105 lbs.; L. H. Houser, 903 Horewood, 140 lbs., 8 ozs.; A. Leadbetter, 1471 Edgeware, 108 lbs. 8 ozs.; Jim Maxwell, 852 Seven Oaks, 155 lbs.; Ken Toby, 919 Dunsmuir, 125 lbs.; Doug Edginton, 826 Craigflower, 120 lbs., 6 ozs.; Colin Menzies, 441 Vancouver, 119 lbs., 4 ozs.

Terry Thomas, of the English Milward fishing tackle firm, was in town last week and loaded with some cute yarns on fishing. If you want to hear the best, complete with Scotch accent, go see Stan Williams.

★ ★ ★

Bill Johnston and Charlie Guiguet came back this week from a successful duck-geese hunting trip in the island's west coast Tofino area.

"Millions of ducks and we easily got our limits; geese still far below what we saw there last year, although we got a half-dozen," said young skeet-shooting Bill. He says that Bud Page of Victoria will be going up for a hunt there next week, and also that Capt. W. D. Holmes, R.C.N. (retired) and party will be invading those fertile duck shooting grounds. Bill said that Lieutenant Governor Clarence Wallace, a keen sportsman, is gunning for wildfowl at Pitt Meadows on the mainland and will probably try for Tofino ducks and geese this month.

Biggest Christmas turkey shoot of this area, the Victoria Gun Club shoot at Albert Head Road skeet and trap-shooting grounds, will be held Dec. 14. It is wide open to all shotgun marksmen. See Roger Monteith if you want to go to Nitinat turkey shoot to be held Nov. 23.

Allan Stonehouse, 1729 Hampshire, was the winner of the television set in the recently-concluded membership drive of the Victoria Fish and Game Protective Association, reports president Ray Ritchie. He got 16 new members. The shotgun prize went to Max Boas, 1239 Tattersall, while the casting rod and reel was won by D. Martin, 3264 Alder. Women's Auxiliary of the club is in charge of the club's big game banquet this month. President is Mrs. Fred Hughes. Mrs. Bruce Winsby is secretary and other chief members are Mrs. Phyllis Ritchie and Mrs. Frank Sellars.

SAVOIE IN IMPRESSIVE VICTORY OVER HARRIS

OTTAWA, Nov. 14 (BUP)—Canadian lightweight champion Armand Savoie of Montreal won a unanimous decision Thursday night when he sent Leslie Harris, of Puerto Rico, crashing to the canvas twice in 10 rounds. It was a non-title bout.

Savoie, at 144 outweighing his opponent by four pounds, pounded Harris to the floor in the fourth and eighth rounds with jarring rights, before a crowd of more than 5,000.

A.A.U. Seeks Better Press-Radio Relations

HAMILTON, Nov. 14 (CP)—The Amateur Athletic Union of Canada has decided that the union's success depends on good relations with the country's press and radio.

At the same time, it chided "some newspaper men" who find the union "a convenient whipping post when they have some grievances on amateur sport which they wish to air."

A report of the public relations committee, presented at the A.A.U.'s 59th annual meeting said, however, that "we encourage these attacks as long as we pursue a policy of non-communication of our activities and policies on a national basis."

The report, presented by chairman Fred Rowell of Vancouver, urged that the union take "positive" steps to encourage better relations with newspapers and radio.

The report warned that "the continual barrage of criticism of officials in amateur sport will have the inevitable result of eliminating many officials who have interested themselves in promoting amateur sport at their own expense—and deter would-be officials from giving amateur sport the necessary stimulus to raise the national performance of our athletes.

"This negative critical attiture might be eliminated or modified if the press and radio were kept informed of our activities and policies at frequent intervals, and might be replaced by a positive attitude which would encourage and stimulate the union to further efforts," the report added.

Shantz Named Most Valuable

NEW YORK, Nov. 14 (AP)—Bobby Shantz, the Philadelphia Athletics' pint-sized pitching marvel, Thursday won the American League most-valuable-player award by a landslide vote.

BOBBY SHANTZ
". . . size means nothing.

The talented little lefty, who led the league with a 24-7 won-and-lost record, received 16 first-place votes from the 24-man committee of the Baseball Writers' Association.

Allie Reynolds, New York Yankee pitching ace, polled four firsts, and Mickey Mantle, his sensational outfield mate, drew three to finish second and third.

The only other first-place ballot went to Nelson Fox, Chicago second baseman, who finished seventh in the point totals.

On the basis of 14 points for a first-place vote, nine for second and so on down to one for 10th, Shantz totaled 280 points. Reynolds had 183 and Mantle 143, followed by Yankee Yogi Berra with 104.

Cleveland spotted four men in the first 10, including pitchers Early Wynn (23-12), Bob Lemon (22-11) and Mike Garcia (22-11). Wynn was fifth, Lemon eighth and Garcia ninth. Al Rosen, third baseman with 28 homers and 105 runs batted in, rounded out the Cleveland contingent in 10th place.

Ferris Fain, Athletics' first baseman and batting champ for the second successive year, finished sixth.

FIFTH INFIELDER

Called a "fifth infielder" because of his great glove work, Shantz beat the world champion Yankees four times and whipped Cleveland three times. His strike-out total of 152 was second only to Reynold.' 161.

Shantz, who is five feet six and a-quarter inches tall and weighs 139½, suffered a broken bone in his left wrist in the final week of the season.

Williams En Route To Korea?

CHERRY POINT, N.C., Nov. 14 (AP)—Marine Capt. Ted Williams, former major league batting star, received his orders today to report to the Pacific coast for transfer overseas.

Williams' present stay on active duty is expected to continue until Nov., 1953. This would preclude his return to baseball next year.

The former Boston Red Sox outfielder, a marine reserve officer, is to report to the Marine Corps Air Station, El Toro, Calif., by Jan. 2, before receiving his transfer as a replacement overseas as a jet fighter pilot.

Grey Cup Film Embargo Ires Paramount Brass

TORONTO, Nov. 14 (CP)—Dave Price, Toronto radio and television sports commentator, says he has exclusive film rights at Varsity Stadium for the Grey Cup football game November 29.

Before the newsreel companies can get into the stadium to film the game, they will have to deal with Price.

Win Barron, newsreel editor for Paramount, said as far as his company is concerned, payment for newsreel rights will not be considered.

"My company has been taking pictures of the Grey Cup since it started," he said. "We've done as much as anyone—the newspapers and radio included—to build this thing into the great show it is. Now they want us to pay to get into the park. Not a chance.

"Before we do that we'll run a statement on the screens saying we're unable to bring Canadians the Grey Cup game because we've been refused permission to enter the stadium. Newsreel companies don't pay for permission to film an event."

About five newsreel companies are affected.

Art Chipman, president of the Canadian Rugby Union, is quoted as saying his interpretation of Price's contract is that it permits him exclusive rights to 16-millimetre color films of the Grey Cup game for sale for promotional purposes to companies which send them out for showing at banquets and smokers. He said he will be here about Nov. 25 to "see what we can do to straighten this thing out."

Puck Future Still in Doubt

TORONTO, Nov. 14 (BUP)—The hockey future of Herb Dickenson, young New York Ranger forward, was still in doubt eight days after a puck seriously injured his right eye.

Dr. T. J. Pashby said a successful operation had been performed to remove blood from the eye, but there was no indication when he could return to the Ranger line-up. Dickenson, in Western Hospital here, still has both eyes bandaged although his left eye was uninjured.

He was injured during the warm-up period before the Toronto-New York game here Nov. 5 when a shot, deflected by goalie Chuck Raynor's stick, struck Dickenson as he skated near the net.

VANCOUVER, B.C., Nov. 14 (BUP) — Former world heavyweight boxing champion Max Baer predicts Jersey Joe Walcott will become the first man to regain the crown by beating Rocky Marciano in their return bout.

"Walcott's not so dumb," Baer said in an interview. "He'll win it back, then retire with no worries.

SCRIBE CALLS FOR FREE SPEECH

Should Umps Beef?

By GAYLE TALBOT

NEW YORK, Nov. 14 (AP)—Our position, simply stated, is that baseball umpires should have just as much right to pop off in public as the players and managers, and if you think this is going to be a defense of Larry Goetz for his needling remark recently that the Yankees are "cry babies," that's correct.

This is not a new thought on our part. For many a season we have strained against the unwritten rule that the men in blue are not to be quoted. Some of the most powerful stories and many of the most pungent observations we have ever heard came from umpires in their off-duty hour and yet very few of them have been passed on to the public because the umpires took it for granted that they would not be.

It has been a distinct loss to sports literature, and this is a personal plea to president Warren Giles of the National League not to natter at Goetz for having stuck a pin into the sensitive world champions. It was fun to watch the Dowager Duchess jump and yell foul. The worst commissioner Ford Frick had to say about the incident was that Larry's remarks were "unfortunate," and he didn't look very severe when he said it.

The Yankees, one may have noticed, lost no time in coming back, hard at the National League arbiter. They worked him over good, and there was even the implied threat that he might not be welcome to help officiate other world series in which the Bombers are participants. Whether this was sporting is perhaps open to argument, but it doesn't matter for the reason that Goetz' turn to work the play-off won't come around again for some six years, and by that time he'll likely have retired.

The point is that players, managers and even club presidents never hesitate to say what they think of umpires.

As it happens, Goetz is a fellow who loves baseball much more than most men connected with the game.

Some of us knew during the series that Larry and the Yanks were not going steady. Larry said as much. Big John Mize, the former National Leaguer, was particularly burned because the first time he questioned a called strike, Goetz had commented "I see you haven't changed a bit." Yogi Berra and Larry were not buddies because Larry objected to Yogi's helping him call balls and strikes. "If you don't stop that guy quick, you'll find he's umpiring for you," Larry said.

Totems to Host Kits In 'Homecoming' Game

Victoria High Totems will play host to Kitsilano High School of Vancouver in an exhibition game at the Victoria Gym tonight at 7.30.

Totems will be out to break a three-game losing streak when they meet the Kits in the annual home-coming game—one of the biggest events of the high school sports year.

After winning their opening game of the season, Totems dropped a pair to Alberni by close margins and then were swamped by Normal School last week.

Th strength of Kitsilano is not known. However, the rivalry between the two clubs has been growing stronger for the past five years and rugged action is expected. The teams split a home-and-home series last year.

Booster passes will not be recognized for this game.

Council Backs Planning Over Mayor's Protests

Despite unqualified objection from Mayor Claude Harrison and Ald. Robert Macmillan, both of whom feared "the city will find itself stuck again," City Council gave assurance Thursday night that it would participate fully in the Capital Regional Planning Board.

Moreover, it would provide the $4,900 asked of it to finance the board during the forthcoming year.

Establishment of the Capital Regional Planning Board was authorized by the provincial government last November, and was organized in an initial way, at that time, by the department of municipal affairs. So that it may be established on a permanent basis, all councils of Greater Victoria now are being asked to back the board financially.

H. R. Stephen, vice-chairman of Victoria's own Town Planning Commission, recommended to council at its informal Thursday night meeting that the city take the lead in this regard.

SUPPORT EXPECTED

He gave assurance that both Saanich and Oak Bay would be in it, and thought that Esquimalt would join, too.

The R.T.P.B. plans to employ a full-time director, and provide him with a staff of three to carry out the work for the first year. It is estimated operations of the first year will cost $20,000. The board relies on receiving half of this sum as a grant from the provincial government.

Mayor Claude Harrison, in attacking the scheme, said the suggestion that the provincial government would pay half the expense was "more than likely just a piece of bait."

He pointed out that without government money, Victoria's share would be $9,800.

COST FEARED

"And that's just to start," declared the mayor. "It's all very well saying it won't cost any more but I've never known anything of this nature that didn't increase its expenditures once it got going."

The mayor said the city proper had all its streets made, and that there was little planning to do in that regard. He declared it was unfair to suggest city taxpayers now pay a major share toward development of outlying districts.

"They'll build up all right," he said. "As a matter of fact they are already threatening to do more than that."

"We want to avoid burdening the city with commissions and boards and other things which cost us money, and which we can do without. We could soon be in a position where we might reduce taxes if we don't commit ourselves to wild expenditures. In another 10 years we could be in a very happy position."

MAJORITY SUPPORT

Ald. Waldo Skillings, who led the move to support the C.R.P.G., and won six other aldermen to his side, commended the mayor for speaking "forthrightly and courageously" but held regional planning "a must" in this vicinity.

The aldermen held it was unfair for the city to expect business to volunteer their services and donate their time to solve the city's planning problems, which, he said, were many and complex.

"You only get what you pay for" he declared. "We shouldn't turn this down simply to save dollars and cents now. We have an obligation not only to the taxpayers of today, but to taxpayers of tomorrow."

J. W. Wilson, executive director of the Lower Mainland Regional Planning Board, and principal architect for the Capital Regional Board, was called upon by Ald. Skillings to discuss the case further.

'MISCONCEPTIONS'

Mr. Wilson felt Mayor Harrison "suffered from certain misconceptions."

He said there was no danger of the board costing more than $20,000, and that since the city was asked to provide less than $5,000 out of an over-all budget of $7,000,000, he considered "the sum is hardly worth calculating."

He compared Victoria with Vancouver and noted the mainland city, after 25 years of active town planning, had only just realized its tremendous value, and that it had undertaken to operate its own planning department with a budget of more than $55,000 a year. He said the head of the new department, imported from England, was to receive $13,000 a year.

He said the C.R.P.B. director, who, it is proposed, would be paid $6,000, would likely have to be imported from the U.K. or the U.S. since there are few qualified experts in this field in Canada.

Mr. Wilson noted that the provincial government already provided one-third of the cost of the Lower Mainland Regional Planning Board, and concluded it would give the Greater Victoria board at least that sum, if not more, in view of the fact the government has its home here.

Ald. Macmillan, who spoke after most other aldermen had supported the proposal, declared: "I'm sick and tired of the city of Victoria taking the lead. Every time we take the lead we get stuck."

He said the Greater Victoria Arts Centre was an example of what he meant.

"We were told the other municipalities were going to support that and that we should take the lead. We did and the other didn't, so we find ourselves morally obligated to bear the burden all alone."

He said if Vancouver had had active planning for 25 years it appeared the new move of that city to spend in excess of $50,000 for a new planning division meant "they need another expert to fix the mistakes of the former one."

He doubted if the existing Victoria Town Planning Commission was entirely on the right track at all times. He said there was a general attitude among council members to approve all commission suggestions because "they're all fine fellows and they're giving their time free."

CROSSED SWORDS

Ald. Skillings, in replying to Ald. Macmillan, declared: "Anyone with any real experience on this council would be in favor of this plan. There seems to be a tendency for new people on the council to think everything is a cinch."

Ald. Macmillan replied: "It's all very well to listen to older members and profit from their experience but one must be awfully careful not to stagnate."

E. W. Arnott, Victoria T.P.C. member, who acted as chairman of the meeting, called for order at this point.

Siding with Ald. Skillings on the issue were Aldermen Scurrah, Pinfold, Smith, Mulliner, Dowell and Neely. Absent from the meeting were Ald. Christie and Ald. Murdoch.

Ald. Skillings promised T.P.C. representatives that council would hold a special meeting early next week to give formal approval to Victoria's participation in the C.R.P.B.

BUCK LUCK LOOKS UP

Mother Tells Court Of Suicide Agreement

VERNON, B.C., Nov. 14 (CP)—A statement in which a young mother was quoted as telling police she held her mentally-retarded baby in her arms while her husband fed the child poisoned milk was admitted as evidence Thursday in Assize Court here.

The statement added the man and woman sipped champagne spiked with the same type of poison to seal a suicide pact. Bodies of the child and husband were found in an auto court on the outskirts of Penticton, B.C., in March.

Ingridia Deglavs, 22, also known as Mrs. Ingrid Seeberg, is charged with murdering her 11-month-old daughter Victoria because the child was doomed to a life of idiocy.

The trial goes into its third day Friday before Mr. Justice A. D. MacFarlane.

The statement quoted the woman as saying the child died and she became unconscious. When she awoke she found her common-law husband, Manfred Seeberg, dead.

The statement went on to say she subsequently tried to kill herself.

The bodies were found when Mrs. Seedberg led R.C.M.P. to the cabin after running from the auto court earlier.

Ingridia Deglavs is a native of Latvia and has been in Canada only a matter of months. Her mother arrived here Wednesday from London to be at her daughter's side during the trial.

41,000 BREAD WINNERS EARN SALARIES OF $6,000

OTTAWA, Nov. 14 (CP)—The breadwinners of more than 160,000 wage-earning families reported earnings in 1951 of less than $1,000 a year. In contrast, the heads of 41,000 families showed annual wages of more than $6,000.

This information was outlined Thursday in a Bureau of Statistics analysis based on last year's decennial census.

In more than 65 per cent of the families, there was only one wage-earner. About 26 per cent had two or more.

The largest group—492,000 families—showed that the head of the family earned between $2,000 and $2,500 annually.

Between $1,000 and $2,000 a year was earned by the heads of 462,000 families; 365,000 between $2,500 and $3,000; 299,000 between $3,000 and $4,000; 109,000 between $4,000 and $6,000.

STILL NO NICKNAME

Prince Charles Enjoys Fourth Birthday Party

LONDON, Nov. 14 (Reuters)—The Duke of Cornwall, sturdy blue-eyed heir to the British throne better known to the world as Prince Charles, celebrated his fourth birthday today—still without a nickname.

Many restrictions on the royal upbringing have been waived for the celebration, but not the ban on nicknames imposed in his nursery days. The Queen, herself known as "Lilibet" to her family before she acceded to the throne, calls her son "Charles" and expects all others to do the same.

The court circular, official diary of royalty, refers to the youngster solemnly as the Duke of Cornwall, his accepted title until the Queen decides he is old enough to be proclaimed Prince of Wales.

In one department, Charles was as free today as any birthday child in the world. The Queen agreed to lift his rigid diet which forbids meat, rich pastries and more than two candies a day.

Outside of meat extracts in soup and sauces, the Prince has never eaten meat. The Queen wants him to stay away from meat until he is older.

Before receiving his birthday presents after rising at about 8 a.m., Charles "received" close members of the family.

In the afternoon, he had a birthday tea with a huge cake and normally-forbidden foods.

His father, the Duke of Edinburgh, wants Charles to develop a love of sports and sailoring, leading to a naval career. It was believed the Queen prefers army training, thus breaking with the naval tradition of King George V and VI.

So far, Charles has shown signs of supporting his mother's hopes. His nursery is crowded with toy soldiers, specially made for him to include every regiment in the brigade of guards.

Whatever career the blond Prince takes, he has already shown a determined spirit of his own. Once, on a walk with his grandmother, he asked to take over the controls of a crane working on the grounds.

"When you are a bigger boy, you shall," said Queen Mother Elizabeth.

"No, no, now," the Prince demanded.

Being a grandmother, she gave in: The Prince mounted the crane platform and handled the levers while workmen stood around beaming.

The Prince has already absorbed some of the self-discipline that a future monarch requires. He rarely cries. One of the few times was when his mother said farewell to him before her tour of Canada.

Much as the Prince must hold back his feelings in public, he is allowed to let out pent-up steam upon his return to the palace nursery. There, he is free to beat wildly on his toy drum, blow on his trumpet or sing at the top of his lungs.

DEATH AT YOUR SHOULDER

G.I.'s Want Ike 'Up Front' Witness

'Nothing to Live For,' Say Men in Korea Bunkers, Telling of Those Who 'Cracked Up'

By FREDERICK C. PAINTON

WESTERN FRONT, Korea, Nov. 14 (UP)—Riflemen in this dimly-lit bunker hope President-Elect Dwight D. Eisenhower will come right up to the front lines when he visits Korea.

They think he should see for himself what sweating out shells and patrolling Communist territory day after day and night after night with death constantly at your shoulder can do to a soldier in Korea.

"A month of this will put you in a strait jacket" said Pfc. Frederick J. Kling 21 of Fort Wayne, Ind. "You got nothing to live for."

Kling and his pals have been on this hill for 18 days. That's long enough for the "bad part" of the Korean war to become engraved on their minds forever.

"See that communications trench out there?" said Cpl. Robert Murphy, 22, of Baltimore, Md. The trench was blocked with bodies—mostly, but not all, Chinese.

"There's leg bones, hip bones and everything out there," he said. "You get out there after you eat and you throw up. A couple of days ago we dug up another body—some guy from Massachusetts.

"Bad part" also means the three men who have cracked up on this hill in the last 18 days.

One was a tough ex-Ranger, another was a lieutenant with the Silver Star for gallantry, and the last was a kid who could not stand artillery.

The ex-Ranger had just come back from a raid.

"He was all right on the raid," said Sgt. James Cleverly of Sutton, Vt. "Then he had to carry this body back. I guess that got him. It took three of us to hold him down. We tied him up with phone wire."

The lieutenant was awarded a Silver Star for his part in the raid. When he came back to this hill, the enemy started shelling.

"He was lying in the trench, face down, saying 'Are the Chinks coming, are the Chinks coming?'" Cleverly said. "We heard that when they gave him the medal in the hospital he buried it in the sand under his cot."

The kid just sat in the bunker and cried, they said.

This is the "bad part" these men want Eisenhower to see. But they are afraid army brass will keep the President-elect far behind the front.

"I think all the people that come over just to see the good part," said Pfc. Clark V. Mills of Harrisburg, Pa., "they stay back there with all the brass. Ike should come up and spend a night out here."

This caused an argument over whether a future president should risk his neck out here. Mills finally conceded:

"Well, he should at least talk to the guys on the line instead of the guys in the rear with three hot meals a day."

Nobody knew what Ike could do about ending the Korean war. But they had one concrete suggestion:

"Tell him to fix the point system so a man knows when he's going home."

And as I left, one of the men added:

"Tell him we like Ike—if he can get us out of here."

A. H. Sutherland Funeral Set For Saturday

Funeral services for the late Alexander H. Sutherland, 2800 Dewdney Ave., former president of the Victoria and Island Branch of the Canadian Authors' Association, and vice-president of the main body, will be held at 3 p.m. in McCall's Funeral Chapel Saturday. Mr. Sutherland died Thursday at the age of 81 years.

Rev. Moir A. J. Waters and Rev. W. G. Wilson will officiate at the funeral service. Interment will take place in Colwood Burial Park.

Born in Kildonan, Man., Mr. Sutherland came to this city 20 years ago. He took an active interest in sports, music and poetry and was one of the main supporters of the Arts Centre of Greater Victoria.

Other interests included philately, and for a term he served as president of the Canadian Philatelic Society.

Mr. Sutherland is equally well-known in Manitoba where he spent the greater part of his life serving with the Union Bank, now known as the Royal Bank. He served a term as mayor of Hartney, Man., while bank manager there.

He did much to encourage writing of poetry on the prairies. He was three times judge of the annual Alberta Poetry Contest.

His wife pre-deceased him in 1938. He is survived by several nieces and nephews living in Victoria and Manitoba.

Padre Wants Humans Helped First

"There are too many people banded together in Victoria for the protection of animals . . and not enough for the protection of young people," Rev. W. Hills told an Optimist Club luncheon Thursday.

The club, proponents of various fields of boys' work received high praise from the colorful vicar of Cadboro Bay. "Instead of writing letters to the editors about the poor dumb cats," he said referring to recent juvenile outrages," people should write about the poor dumb perpetrators of these acts."

"Why can't we bottle all this indignation and pour it into human beings?" he asked.

He took issue with the Optimist slogan to the effect that there are no bad boys. That expressed idea, he said, feeds the mood of teenagers that feels "We are not responsible for our behavior . . it is our parents who are to blame."

The meeting also honored Fred Bleasedale, bike repair shop proprietor, for his many kind deeds to boys who drop into his shop. Ed Fairey, CKDA announcer and supporter of the Solarium Christmas fund, also was present and highly lauded by the Optimists for his work along these lines.

Both were presented with framed copies of the Optimists' creed.

Married Men in 27th End German Stay, Homeward Bound

HANNOVER, Nov. 14 (Reuters).—A total of 686 married officers and men of the Canadian 27th Infantry Brigade left for home Thursday after a year's service in Germany as part of North Atlantic Treaty forces.

Many friends were on the station to see them off on a cold and foggy day. Two military bands played as the soldiers boarded the train.

Major G. J. Baird of Regina, commanding the first returning batch, explained "We shall arrive at Rotterdam . . . tonight, and then we are going to board the troopship Neptunia for Quebec.

"In 10 days we shall be back in Canada."

The commander of the 27th Brigade, Brig. Geoffrey Walsh, who is returning home next month and is expected to become director-general of Canadian military training, saw the contingent off.

Many of the Canadians carried Bavarian leather shorts for their children, folding umbrellas for their wives and souvenirs of all kinds.

Hospital Bed Lack Real; Example Cited

Repeated Calls for Ailing Woman Fail to Gain Admittance, Relative Says

Victoria hospitals are short of beds regardless of what hospital administrators and medical superintendents say, in the view of Mrs. Stanley Day, 418 Vancouver Street.

She told the Times today five calls in two days at St. Joseph's Hospital Nov. 4 and 5 failed to produce a bed for her sister, Mrs. Herdon Mann, 420 Vancouver Street.

"She was quite ill and we finally got a bed for her at Rest Haven, 20 miles out of the city," Mrs. Day said.

Current controversy over hospital beds arose from an inquest on the death of Vincent Paone, Nov. 6. Dr. John Dalton was reported to have told the inquest there were no beds at St. Joseph's hospital between Oct. 8 and 15.

Sister Mary Rose, superior and medical superintendent of St. Joseph's Hospital, issued a statement Thursday that the late Mr. Paone was given a bed six hours after application for hospitalization was made.

SHORTAGE DENIED

At the same time, George Masters, administrator at Royal Jubilee Hospital, denied any bed shortage, in a statement to the Times.

Mrs. Day retaliated: "There definitely is a shortage. There were no beds available. You wonder what you are paying your hospital insurance for.

"My sister has lived here for three years and paid her insurance. Then the first time she needed a hospital bed there wasn't one."

Here is the sequence of events related by Mrs. Day.

STORY OF FRUSTRATION

"My sister had been ill for a week. The doctor called Monday night and said he would leave an admittance slip at St. Joseph's. I was to call Tuesday morning for admittance.

"There was nothing at 11. They said call back at 2. I called back at 2 and they said they were very sorry, no beds available and to call back tomorrow.

"Wednesday morning I called at 11. Again the reply no beds available. Try again. At 2 I called again. They were very sorry but no vacancies. Try again tomorrow.

"At four my sister was worse and I called again. I told them my sister was quite ill and needed a hospital bed. They said they were sorry there was notihng they could do and for me to try again tomorrow.

"About half an hour later my other sister called and tried. Same reply . . . no beds available. try again tomorrow.

"At 8 o'clock that night we called and got her a hospital bed at Rest Haven.

Mr. Masters, administrator at Jubilee, said in his statement: "Victoria is not short of hospital beds!"

Hospital admissions, he said, are governed by the condition of the patient and fall into three categories: Emergent, urgent or elective.

"Emergent cases are admitted to hospital, without question, as soon as it is indicated that the patient must have immediate hospital care," Mr. Masters said.

"Urgent cases are generally admitted to hospital within a few days of application for admission.

"Elective cases are admitted by arrangement for a predetermined date and such cases may have their admission delayed because of the press of urgent cases. In Victoria it is not often that an elective case is kept out of hospital beyond the pre-arranged date," Mr. Masters said.

"The average stay of patients in hospital is greater in Victoria than the average for Canada as a whole," he said.

"Most authorities now agree that six acute beds per thousand of population is a generous ratio," he said. "In Victoria the average is 7.84 beds."

Mr. Masters stated there were 980 acute general hospital beds in service at the present time in the Greater Victoria area. In addition to this are 300 beds at Victoria Veterans' Hospital.

Royal Jubilee has in service 480 acute beds, St. Joseph's, 400 and there are 100 at Rest Haven, Sidney, Mr. Masters said.

Record Crowds, Entries Expected for Fair Opening

TORONTO, Nov. 14 (BUP)—Thousands of Canada's finest farm animals, scrubbed and combed to a polish, greeted denim-clad farmers and top-hatted horse show fans at the opening of the Royal Winter Fair today.

Fine Fall weather was expected to bring out record crowds to see judges weed through 17,000 entries to award $136,000 worth of prizes.

Lt.-Gen. Sir Archibald Nye, British High Commissioner to Canada, will officially open the eight-day fair in ceremonies in the horse show ring before a society audience tonight. Mayor Allan Lamport will welcome jumping teams from France, Mexico, Ireland and the United States.

Big events of the opening day's judging was expected to be the award of a world wheat championship, one of eight world championships in the seed, grain and hay class. The British, entering the farm sections for the first time, had a strong bid for the traditionally Canadian wheat championship with a sample from a Norfolk farm of the world's record wheat yield—125 bushels to the acre.

BABY A YEAR HELPS TORONTO WOMAN KEEP HER RECORD CLEAR

TORONTO, Nov. 14 (CP)—Crown Attorney David Humphries charged Thursday that Ruth Foster, 30, became pregnant purposely to get a lighter sentence. He said it was the second time she had done this.

Humphries said the woman was not pregnant last April when arrested on a charge of theft and released on bail, but now was expecting a child in three months.

Mr. Humphries said on the first occasion three years ago Mrs. Foster, charged with theft, had the case continuously postponed until she appeared in court with a new baby. She was convicted then and given a suspended sentence, later quashed. Thursday she was convicted of stealing $100 of scrap iron and sentenced to 30 days in jail.

THE CAINE MUTINY

Twenty-third installment from the book THE CAINE MUTINY, copyright, 1951, by Herman Wouk. Distributed by Doubleday Syndicate.

It was all of a long winter night before Willie returned to his own room in the Ahwanee Hotel on the floor of the Yosemite Valley. He sank into an armchair in an excess of stupefied pleasure, still thinking with joy of his last glimpse of May, smiling up at him as he closed her door. It was a perfectly satisfying picture, and he had no way of knowing that in her room below May was crouched in a chair, shivering and crying.

It was the familiar story: the young man back from the war, eager for his love, impatient of the cautious rules of peacetime; his girl no less eager for him, and ready to do anything to make him happy.

After breakfast the next morning—they were both very gay—Willie and May rented skis. There were few people on the trails, and often they seemed to be playing by themselves in a white mountain world. They stopped in the Badger Pass ski lodge, warmed themselves by a great log fire, and drank hot buttered rum. Willie felt most colossally pleased with himself. "What do you see in me, I wonder?" he said, halfway through his second hot buttered rum. "A glorious girl like you?"

"First you answer a question for me. Why did you introduce me to your mother as Marie Minotti? You haven't used that name since the day we met."

Willie stared at the red smoky flames in the fireplace, and searched his mind for a pleasant answer. He had wondered himself at the impulse that had brought May's real name to his tongue, and had discovered an unpalatable reason for it: the fact that, underneath all his powerful desire for May, he was ashamed of her. At that moment, May had been Marie Minotti. "I don't know," he said. "It just seemed right to tell Mom your real name, and start off on an honest footing. I didn't think much about it."

"I see. May I have another hot buttered rum? The last. I'm a little dizzy. Possibly from all this fresh air."

"If you want," she said, when Willie returned and handed her the drink, "I can tell you what a glorious girl like me sees in you."

"Fine. What?" Willie nestled complacently beside her.

"Nothing."

"I see." He buried his nose in his glass.

"I mean it. I've been trapped. In the beginning you seemed so fumbling and harmless to me, I just let myself enjoy your company, thinking nothing would come of it. Well, the whole thing just went on and one, and got to be a habit, and now here we are. I was a darn fool to come out here, and I'm going straight home day after tomorrow. I don't like what's happening. I feel as thought I'd slipped and broken a leg."

"You're fascinated by my mind," said Willie with a yawn. "Nice and warm by this fire, you know?"

"Let's get out of here," said May, slamming down her unfinished drink.

That night Willie kissed May again; but an odd feeling that he had better do so replaced last night's fervor. May felt the difference in his lips, and her own remained coolly prim. Instead of going upstairs, they danced for a while. At last they went to May's room, but Willie found everything different. May sat in an armchair in a position that made it hard for him to approach her, and she chattered in the most matter-of-face way about Hunter College, Marty Rubin, and the clubs where she had sung. Willie became bored and exasperated, and at the same time found May looking more and more provokingly beautiful. At last he rose, went to the armchair, and, while she talked on, attempted an affectionate gesture. May, with a slight neat turn of her shoulder, deflected his hand.

"Look, Willie," said May, leaning away and regarding him calmly, "you have wrong ideas. I've done my share and a little more to welcome the boys home—and never mind how I feel about it, at this moment—but that doesn't mean you've moving in with me. I like you, Willie. I've made that all too plain, but I haven't picked up new habits. Don't, don't get strong and virile now. You'll just make an ape of yourself, and anyway I can handle you with one hand tied behind me."

"I believe you," said Willie furiously. "I daresay you've had plenty of practice. Good night!"

The door slam was loud enough to wake everybody on the floor, and Willie, embarrassed, scuttled up the red-lit emergency stairway instead of ringing for the elevator.

★ ★ ★

Early the next morning Willie was sitting at a table in the dining room when May came walking through a broad beam of sunshine falling across the doorway. He stood and pulled a chair out for her, and two thoughts followed each other through his mind: "Do I want to live with this person for the rest of my life?" and "How can I live with anyone else? Where will I find her again?"

"Hello," he said. "Hungry?"

"Not very."

"I'm sorry about last night," said Willie suddenly, though he had not had any intention of apologizing.

May smiled at him wanly and answered, "There's nothing to be sorry about, Willie."

Willie was seized with a feeling of vertigo, an actual dizziness. He swallowed hard, and said, "What would you think of spending the rest of your life with a monster like me?"

May looked at him, a little amused, a little saddened. "What's this, now, dear?"

"I don't know, it seems to me maybe we ought to start talking about getting married," Willie said doggedly.

May looked away, and glanced around the sunny dining room. Most of the tables were empty. In a corner near a window a pair of honeymooners in the bright ski suits were leaning toward each other, the bride feeding a bit of coffee cake into her husband's mouth. "Well, what do you say?"

"What do I say about what Willie?"

"About our getting married."

"I haven't heard you propose."

"I propose to you that we get married," said Willie with extreme distinctness.

"I'll think about it," said the girl. She glanced up at Willie demurely. He wore a look of such pained surprise that she burst out laughing. "Oh, look, darling," she said, "this is terribly sweet of you. I'm sure it's the best you can manage. But everything's all wrong this morning. I can't jump at your words and hold you to them just because you're feeling sheepish, and sorry for me. If we're going to get married, why, I guess maybe we will sometime. I don't know. Talk about other things."

U.N. Protests Shooting of Medical Man

MUNSAN, Korea, Nov. 14 (AP).—United Nations truce negotiators today "strongly protested" to the Communists as "wanton" the death of an unarmed medical aid man in the Panmunjom neutral zone.

The medic was killed two days ago. Allied spokesmen said the rifle bullet had been identified as the type used by the Communists.

The United Nations protest touched off a 2½-hour wrangle between Allied and Red negotiators, during which the Reds lodged two protests of their own—one of alleged neutral zone violations by American planes and the other on a prisoner-of-war death the Allies had reported as a suicide.

The medic was killed within 100 yards of the Panmunjom road, almost a mile inside the neutral perimeter.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN HOTEL SEATTLE

PEACE SEEKER EMBROILED

Soviet Defender's Hecklers Hostile

John Hines, professed seeker after world peace, who has recently been hunting support in Russia, had anything but a peaceful meeting here Thursday.

The Vancouver trade unionist gave an impassioned talk about his observations while attending Canadian Soviet Friendship Society meetings in Russia. When the question period was opened, following the lecture, there was pandemonium.

Attempts to keep order were almost useless. At least one member of the audience complained that he was a satisfied but curious neutral. He had come out to hear first hand of conditions behind the "iron curtain" and he resented the attempts of interlopers to break up the meeting.

"Take that back!" a voice shouted. "We're not trying to break up your meeting."

One of the audience described the heckling group as "a bunch of lawyers."

ANSWERS QUESTIONS

In answer to questions hurled at him, Mr. Hines made the following observations:

"Stalin has a modest apartment in the Kremlin."

"Churches are inadequate in Russia because the building of churches is up to the church."

"A Russian worker can save enough money to buy a car in eight months." And one breath later, he maintained, "The Russian worker does not lose the incentive to work, because he cannot save enough to retire unless he goes without necessities."

"I refuse to state whether I am a member of the L.P.P."

ONLY ONE PARTY

"There is no other party but the Communist party in Russia. You must have high standards of integrity and intelligence to belong."

"The 'escape' stories which tell of people seeking to flee Russian-dominated countries are all told by persons who are sought in Russia as Nazi collaborators."

"The people of Czechoslovakia rule their own country. They were grateful to the Soviet for liberating them . . . and asked them to help re-organize their country."

Mr. Hines would not agree with a questioner who asked if Russia were not a dictatorship. "The police reason with you," he said.

No Referendum On City Parks Board Planned

Ald. Donald Smith's hopes for a board of park commissioners for Victoria, were dashed again at city council meeting Thursday.

Mayor Claude Harrison ruled a motion calling for a referendum "out of order."

Ald. Smith asked that on presentation of a sufficient petition, a by-law be presented for submission to the electorate for their assent to establishment of a parks board.

MAYOR'S OBJECTION

"You are trying to tie council's hands before a petition is taken up," said the mayor.

Under the Municipal Act the council does not have to put a referendum to the electorate even if it receives a petition from one-fifth of the eligible voters, City Solicitor A. J. Patton advised.

Two weeks ago when he first asked council to put the matter to the electorate, Ald. Smith failed to get one supporter on council.

In his second try, he argued that persons taking up the petition should have some indication from council, that if the required number of signatures were received, the matter would be put to the electorate.

Council did not agree.

WANTED HIS PAY CUT

CHESTER, Va. (UP). — The county board was amazed to receive a request for a salary reduction. A county employee, B. J. Banks, 73, asked that his pay be cut from $105 a month to $75 so he would be eligible for social security payments. The board complied.

Baldwin Persuaded Edward VIII Not to Make Fighting Speech, Says Book

LONDON, Nov. 14 (AP)—The late Stanley Baldwin, prime minister when King Edward VIII abdicated in 1936, persuaded the king not to make a fighting speech giving his side of the controversy, says a Baldwin biography to be published Friday.

It is written by historian G. M. Young, a friend of Baldwin.

Edward, now the Duke of Windsor, who gave up the throne to marry the American divorcee, Mrs. Wallis Warfield Simpson, did make a deeply-emotional broadcast to the British people after he had signed the instrument of abdication.

But what he really wanted to say, Young writes, was much sterner stuff which might have split the country. He proposed to tear aside the screen of secrecy when the crisis was at its height in early December. He prepared an address giving his side of the case and read it in private to Baldwin.

The biographer quotes Edward as telling the prime minister:

GO WITH DIGNITY

"You want me to go, don't you? Before I go I think it is right for her sake and mine, that I should speak."

To which Baldwin is said to have replied energetically:

"What I want, sir, is what you told me you wanted: to go with dignity, not dividing the country, and making things as smooth as possible for your successor. To broadcast would be to go over the heads of your ministers and speak to the people.

"You will be telling millions throughout the world—among them a vast number of women—that you are determined to marry one who has a husband living. They will want to know all about her, and the press will ring with gossip, the very thing you want to avoid.

"You may, by speaking, divide opinion; but you will certainly harden it. The churches are straining at the leash, and only three papers would be on your side—The News Chronicle, The Daily Mail and The Daily Express."

BETWEEN TIMES

By MONTE ROBERTS

Punch, the dog who claims he is this man's best friend, has managed to get me into a peck of trouble.

Just because I wouldn't take him to Vancouver with me, he wrote a highly insulting column about cats, and is now sitting back on his haunches, laughing with his tongue out, as I dodge the brickbats.

I don't know what he is laughing at. So far, hardly any of the letters are in favor of dogs.

And hardly any are printable.

Cat lovers are nothing if not frank.

One of the milder letters is signed "Regular Times Reader," and is as follows:

"Dear Between Times:

"Guess I will have to settle this debate about cats, dogs, birds, and Monte Roberts.

"The writer who signed himself 'Lover of Humans & Animals' must like all pets, and I believe a person like that is well liked by everyone. That's how it should be.

"But as for Roberts, believe me, I don't think he is a very likeable person. He only loves his dog, and calls his wife only 'favorite wife.'

"The pictures of cats in the Women's Section last week were lovely pictures. Those Persians and Siamese faces looked so intelligent, good natured; how about changing a face for your column?"

How's this for a change of face?

Another reasonably restrained letter is signed: "My Heart Belongs to Victoria," but reads as though it belonged to a bunch of cats.

It is addressed to Punch, who has given me permission to reprint portions:

"Punch:

"What a write-up in Wednesday's Times! You are not any better than your old man. Why didn't he take you to Vancouver?

"Then you could be boat in the same dog-house. I do think both of you need a nice atomic bone!

"Then Victoria city could continue having dog licenses at full price, and the society section would carry on with their wonderful pictures of felines."

Asked to reply, Punch said with dignity: "I will not lower myself to argue with a cat-lover, especially a cat-lover who makes puns on one-syllable words. The case rests."

Well, I am sorry that Punch started this. But in the interests of honesty, I am bound to admit that I agree with him.

The only time felines are any use at all is to be of some slight assistance to the dogs when it is raining cats and dogs.

Driver Aids in Arrests

Three Sailors Face Obstruction Charge

Pleas of not guilty were entered by three ratings of the R.C.N. in city police court today when they appeared on separate charges of obstructing a police officer in the performance of his duty early this morning.

Charged were Paul Leo Gautreau, Robby Sweluk and Fergus Paul Gray.

They were remanded to Nov. 17, Magistrate H. C. Hall releasing all to the custody of H.M.C.S. Naden.

Robert Dunlop, 21-year-old naval rating who Thursday pleaded guilty to a charge of stealing a purse from Eva David, on a downtown street early Thursday morning, was remanded to next Tuesday for sentence.

William Moresby Jr. appeared as counsel for Dunlop and was granted an opportunity to produce character evidence on the remand date. Magistrate Hall adjourned the case today to give police an opportunity to survey the case to see if a more serious charge was warranted. Prosecutor Alan Bigelow told the court he was satisfied with the theft charge.

After snatching Mrs. David's purse, containing $13, Dunlop ran into the arms of Const. Burdyny. Dunlop's plea to be released to the custody of the navy was refused.

WINDOW SMASHED

The same officer reported that at 12.25 a.m. today he saw four sailors get out of a car at Johnson and Wharf and one of them use a bottle to smash three windows in the Shaw Sheet Metal building at that intersection.

The officer said he went over to apprehend the sailor who had done the damage but that the other three interfered with him to enable their shipmate to escape.

Const. Burdyny said a Bluebird Taxi driver appeared while this "obstruction" was going on. He yelled to the driver to radio his office to telephone the city police charge office to send the patrol.

The patrol wagon appeared and the three accused of obstruction were taken into custody.

Another sailor, Robert N. Longtin, is awaiting sentence on a charge of assaulting Miss Lucia Lee, Chinese nurse, with intent to rob her early last Sunday morning at Douglas and Pandora.

Sentence in this case will be handed down Nov. 19.

Holmes Praise From Nanaimo On Road Work

Maj. H. Cuthbert Holmes, Victoria, chairman of the Associated Vancouver Island Chambers of Commerce roads committee, has received a "pat on the back" and a "slap in the face" for his work.

The Nanaimo group Thursday passed a resolution "commending" him for his work but the joint Courtenay-Comox Chamber Monday asked that he be removed from office because he was "biased."

Lyal Barrie, president of the Courtenay-Comox group, said: "It is becoming apparent that the executive of the A.C.C.V.I. are using the name of the association to further their own ambitions for the roads on the Island.

Other Island groups said they could not understand the Courtenay-Comox move. George Benwell said it might be that "local pressure" had got at Barrie but criticism of Holmes was unwarranted.

R. H. Mawhinney, president of the joint chambers, said the Courtenay-Comox resolution was "ill-conceived and mischevious" and would tend to destroy co-operation "always so apparent between the groups." He said he intended to call a special executive meeting to study the situation.

Drew Calls on Bennett

Progressive Conservative Leader George Drew, right, is pictured leaving Legislative Buildings this morning after calling on Premier W. A. C. Bennett. He is accompanied by Maj.-Gen. G. R. Pearkes, V.C., M.P., for Nanaimo. Premier Bennett declined to have his picture taken with Mr. Drew. Newspaper photographers and a newsreel cameraman were told of the picture ban just before Mr. Drew's arrival. Reason given was that the P.C. leader was simply paying a courtesy call. DREW WOULD END C.B.C.'s CONTROL

Canada's Radio-Television System Draws Call for Reform From Conservative Chief

Television censorship is a matter for the courts to decide, National Progressive Conservative Leader George Drew said in Victoria today.

When asked if he favored provincial censorship of television as proposed by Premier Duplessis of Quebec, Mr. Drew replied: "It's an interesting legal point. The courts probably will have to decide it in the end."

He favored establishment of a supervising authority in place of the C.B.C. to administer radio and television in Canada.

The present system is nonsensical, he said. The absurdity of the present situation is underlined by the fact that Britain, whose government has an absolute monopoly on radio, has decided radio and television are differen and will allow private commercial television states to operate, he added.

"If licenses had been granted to Canadian private stations, there would be television from coast to coast right now, instead of only in Toronto and Montreal where, incidentally, most televiewers watch the Buffalo station. Fewer and fewer people are watching the Canadian stations because of the quality of the programs," he said.

The present government system, he said is like having the C.N.R. setting the rules by which the C.P.R. should operate.

ALL CANADA PAYS

"And the extraordinary thing is that all Canadian taxpayers are now paying to allow Toronto and Montreal people to have television," said Mr. Drew.

Turning to Dominion-provincial-municipal relations, the P.C. leader said the greatest need in the domestic field today is a thorough re-examination of the responsibilities of these three governments within the clearly established principles of the British North America Act.

Asked if he favored federal aid for provincial highways, Mr. Drew said he would favor federal aid for certain designated national highways.

"I don't like the tendency developing which places provinces in the position of having to seek aid for work within their own jurisdiction," he said.

NEW TAX DEAL

He wants a new deal in taxation whereby there would be no "handout" system from one government level down to another. This system, he contended, has been responsible for the breakdown of many countries.

"The provinces and the municipalities shouldn't have to depend on handouts," Mr. Drew said. "We need a new taxation deal. Taxation should be decentralized and brought more under the provincial and municipal governments—closer to the people."

Asked what he though of the Canadian immigration policy, Mr. Drew said he is still trying to find out what the policy is.

"I don't think there is a policy," he added.

He said there is a big immigration staff overseas, but none of the officials know the immigration policy. He said there is a terrific backlog in all offices.

DREW CHARMED DESPITE GALE

Victoria charmed Hon. George Drew, national Progressive Conservative leader, even in the midst of a gale.

"It's a lovely place to live," the Tory chief told Mayor Claude Harrison during a call at City Hall.

Mr. Drew signed the city's guest book and chatted with the mayor for a few minutes.

Muddled Figures Bother Blind

An example of what it terms heartless efficiency" of the office responsible for the issuance of pensions to people without sight was revealed today when the Victoria Council of the Blind met in the Y.W.C.A. here.

This is the story of Mrs. "X."

Mrs. "X" lost her sight in 1946. Because she had hopes of regaining it she did not immediately apply for pension. In 1950, with the life savings of Mr. "X" dwindling, she applied for the pension. Mr. "X," at 68, was not working. Mrs. "X" was granted the federal pension of $40,00, plus a $10.000 bonus from the Province. This year Mr. "X" is 70 . . . and he has been awarded the Old Age Pension. $40.00 a month . . . so, the government has cut the blind lady's pension to $25.00.

All that is bad enough. In August, though, the government informed Mrs. "X" that they had made an error, she should only get $24.00. They took $5.00 from the next cheque to square the books.

Yesterday, they did it again. Sorry, they said, we have found another error. You are only entitled to $23 a month . . . to correct the slip they have made arrangements to send Mrs. "X" her Christmas cheque in the amount of $14.

Stories like that were common, the council says. However, they aren't the kind who complain without doing anything to help themselves.

Today their national executive will present a brief to Ottawa calling for removal of the means test for blind pensioners. They will also ask that their pension be increased to enable them to cope with the current cost of living. You eat just as much when you are sightless, they say.

The same brief will be submitted to Provincial Health Ministere Eric Martin on Dec. 8.

The Canadian Council of the Blind works with assistance and support of the C.N.I.B. and the White Cane Club. The members, as the name suggests, are all without sight . . . but they have great vision of another sort. They can see how to help themselves.

The local executive is led by Mrs. Elizabeth Watling. Other members are: D. J. Stuart, Mrs. David Carr, Claire White, Mrs. David Pollock, Mrs. Margaret Bruce, Jack Fowler and Jack Miller.

Mrs. Watling remarked that they had a sale of handiwork recently, ". . . to help the overseas blind, who are worse off than we are."

Hostel Suggested King's Memorial

Native Sons Take Initial Move for Services' Centre

The movement for a hostel for servicemen took a new turn today.

Victoria Post No. 1, of the Native Sons of British Columbia announced that it is in favor of constructing a "service centre" as a memorial to the late King George VI.

A memorial to the late King has been under discussion in Victoria since last spring when the Post announced it was sponsoring such a scheme. The type of memorial favored by the Post has not been mentioned until today.

The proposal was received enthusiastically by Mayor C. L. Harrison.

"It is a good idea," he said. "Everyone can then be asked to support the centre. I believe the hostel should be a community effort. A project of this sort is of interest to everyone. We need a hostel badly."

DELEGATES CALLED

J. A. Bland, an official of the Post, said a meeting will be held in the City Hall council chamber at 8 p.m., Dec. 3, to discuss a "memorial project." Fifteen city organizations will be sending delegates to the meeting, he said.

Mr. Bland said the organizations all had been asked to participate in a memorial plan.

"The proposal that the King George VI Memorial be in the form of a hostel represents only the views of the Native Sons," said Mr. Bland. "The other organizations may have other suggestions."

ACTION DELAYED

In view of the new turn of events, the special committee appointed by the city council to study the matter is not expected to take any action until the Post and other organizations have held their meeting in December.

Post officials said the memorial project may provide the answer for financing the hostel which is expected to cost about $150,000. Citizens, organizations, the city, the provincial and federal governments will all be asked to subscribe towards the hostel, they said.

SAFE-CRACKERS' LABOR FUTILE ON BUSINESSMEN'S EMPTY SAFE

If safe-crackers had been successful in an overnight attempt on the strongbox of John Meston Co. Ltd., 932 Johnson, they would have been disappointed.

There was nothing of value in the safe.

City detectives report the dial was knocked off the safe and an attempt was made to push back the tumblers to get the door open.

Entry to the office was gained by taking a pane of glass out of the skylight.

New owners of the firm, James Dangerfield and Robert Patch, reported would-be safe-crackers took $10 worth of stamps and an auto radio left in the shop by a customer.

Ontario's Collision Ends Southern Cruise

Cruiser Will Limp Home on Three Screws As Drydocking Shows Unexpected Damage

H.M.C.S. Ontario's South American cruise will be cut short because of damage incurred Oct. 24 in a collision with the Chilean steamship Arauco, it was learned today.

At the time, damage was thought to be slight, but the ship was drydocked at Rio de Janeiro, and it was found that both starboard propellers had been hit.

The cruiser's "wheels" extend far out beyond the hull of the ship. It is believed the freighter tried to pass Ontario too close, nicking the propellers, when she scraped the cruiser's side in the approaches to Buenos Aires.

The starboard outer screw was so badly damaged it is being removed. The starboard inner was also damaged, but is being repaired. Ontario will come home on three propellers, as soon as temporary repairs are completed at Rio.

The cruise was scheduled to extend to December 16. At present the exact date of her return is not known. The ship will make a maximum of about 12 knots on the three propellors. Permanent repair work will be done in Victoria.

DOG'S JOB

Bone-Strip Chore Comes To Biologist

An unpleasant job faces Charlie Guiguet, Provincial Museum biologist.

Mr. Guiguet can look forward to weeks of washing and polishing of bones and bones . . . bones considered valuable by zoologists the world over.

The bones belong to the skeleton of a huge and rare elephant seal which was killed by an Indian near Ucluelet last April and which Vancouver newspapers mistook for the remains of Victoria's Caddy. The seal bones arrived from the West Coast today in two large packing cases.

The elephant seal skeleton was left to weather on a West Coast beach during the Summer months. A week ago, Mr. Guiguet went to Ucluelet to pack and to arrange to have it sent to Victoria.

"It was a nasty job," said Mr. Guiguet. "I never saw so many bones in my life. I had to take all the ribs apart to save space in packing. Now, I've got the job of cleaning and polishing them."

Mr. Guiguet said the bones all will be re-packed in boxes after they have been cleaned and polished.

"We can't re-assemble the bones, because we haven't got the room at the museum to put up the skeleton," said Mr. Guiguet. "It is too bad. They are valuable bones."

Eleven fishermen charged with poaching salmon after having been detected by radar were fined a total of $800 Wednesday in Nanaimo police court.

Radar used in making the arrests was aboard the government fisheries vessel Laurier.

Drivers Escape Injury

Drivers escaped injury when cars driven by Jack R. Stacey, 616 Michigan, and Annie McGreig Higgs, 721 Middleton, collided Thursday at Humboldt and Michigan. Damage was reported "medium."

A request was received at City Hall today from Miss M. McPhail, 2643 Forbes Street, for a street light on Forbes near her home.

Accident Victims Show Improvement

Condition of two of three persons injured in traffic accidents during the last 10 days in the city and Saanich had improved from "fair" to "good" today at Royal Jubilee Hospital.

The injured in an improved condition are Mrs. D. Bell Hyde, 1006 Broad, who suffered a broken leg and injuries to the pelvis, and Richard Corner, 27, of 164 Sims, who sustained a broken leg and other injuries.

John W. Buckler, 80, of 1015 Collinson, struck by a hit-run driver at Quadra-Union on the night of November 3, was reported to be "fairly good." He was hit by a car and left in the Quadra roadway unconscious.

Q.—In what Canadian waters is the white whale hunted?—J.C.R.

Q.—What ships navigated the Northwest Passage prior to the St. Roch, and in what years?

A. — The Encyclopaedia Britanica, in its article on Sir John Franklin, whose ships were the Erebus and the Terror, 1845-48, says; "Franklin is certainly entitled to the honor of being discoverer of the Northwest Passage. The point his ships reached was within a few miles of the known waters of America." Capt. Roald Amundsen and six companions in the little sloop Gjoa, expedition 1903-06, navigated the passage, east to west. The St. Roch, R.C.M.P. auxiliary schooner, west to east, 1940-42; east to west, 1944. Shadowy claims by Russians that ships of theirs had made the passage lack documentation in history.

The St. Roch, after her Arctic voyages, became the first ship to circumnavigate North America. She went south from here, through the Panama Canal and up to Nova Scotia.

SHOPPING GUIDE

Give Old Suit New Chic With Varied Accessories

By PENNY SAVER

You may have bought a new suit this year, if not . . . and you really want to save pennies you can make your old one take on freshness with new accessories . . . especially if the suit is in your most becoming basic color and is not an extreme style.

With a grey suit, for example you might try a grey hat, yellow scarf, white gloves and black shoes and bag.

The fabric or leather you decide on is determined by whether the suit is definitely sporty or can be called right for after-five as well as all day. If the latter, your scarf might be in one of the duller satins, a new type scarf which you can buy for two to three dollars.

The black shoes and bag you purchase can go with anything, including brown, navy or green. The price, of course, will vary according to your own tastes, but should match in material as well as color.

Patterns in scarves or gloves, unless they are very formal, modern, sophisticated ones, look best with sporty-type daytime suits. Touches of gold paint or thread add sophistication. You can buy just such a scarf in town and you'll be amazed at how few pennies it will cost.

If your suit is beige, accessories in chocolate with a gold jewel will look smart. Green, a very fashionable color now, takes to red accessories beautifully—a light red for dark green or a dark red for light green. These are just suggestions.

However, let there be no more than one color, in addition to black and white, in your accessories scheme. Black or white do not count as colors (unless you are striving for a black and white effect).

Wear the suit when you go to buy the accessories and be sure to look at yourself in a full-length mirror in daylight before deciding.

There are no set rules about what colors will flatter you This depends upon whether you are aiming at a contrast, as in a yellow scarf with black hair, or sameness, as in a yellow scarf pointing up blond hair.

In choosing your effect, consider how the color looks against your complexion and keep in mind how many pennies you'll have to spend to gain the effect.

WHY GROW OLD?

By JOSEPHINE LOWMAN

Good Cream Is Essential For Wrinkles Under Eyes

Q. "Is there any way possible to correct wrinkles under the eyes caused from eye strain? I have been told that there is nothing in the world which will remove them."

A. Of course the first thing to do is to wear properly fitted eye glasses so that you stop squinting. I judge you have done this. If the wrinkles are deeply etched, I doubt that you can overcome them. However, you can improve them with regular treatment. Pat an eye cream on the wrinkles every night and leave it on while you sleep. One of the hormone creams might be helpful. The use of a cream emulsion underneath your makeup in the daytime helps. This keeps the skin soft but does not show.

Q. "My hair has a tendency to be dry. Also I notice an ordor from my scalp about two or three days after a shampoo. I wash my hair every week but although I give it several soapings and rinse it well, I find my comb and brush become dirty immediately."

A. I wonder if you are getting all of the soap out of your hair? A vinegar rinse might be helpful because it gets rid of any remaining soap and is good for the scalp. I think that if this trouble continues you would be wise to see a dermatologist. The odor you mention could come from a diseased condition of the little pores or oil outlets.

Q. "Is it possible to remove superfluous hair from the face without causing it to grow in thicker?"

A. Electrolysis is the only way to remove hair permanently, I do not feel that tweezing makes the hair grow in thicker, although this is temporary removal.

Q. "People keep telling me that vinegar makes one thin. Is this so?"

A. No.

Q. "My niece and I have never seen an answer to the following question in your column. What about large veins which are very distressing and a morale robber? My niece is 21 and huge veins stand out on her hands and arms. I, too, am bothered by them but she is so young to be so handicapped. Massage does not help."

A. These are an inherited characteristic. Veins are naturally larger in some people than in others or they may be closer to the surface. Underweight makes them more prominent. You ask about operating on them. Varicose veins can be removed but I doubt very much that the operation you mention would be practical. Keep your hands out of hot water as much as possible and don't worry about the veins. No doubt you are much more conscious of them than others are.

Teenager Should Learn To Handle Her Own Money

By ELIZABETH B. HURLOCK, Ph.D.

When a teenager goes to work during vacations, what should she do with her earnings? Should she hand them over to her parents, keep them to do with as she wishes, or share them with her family? That is the problem facing this 17-year-old girl:

Hurlock

(Q.) "I have worked at summer and Christmas jobs since I was 14. I have always felt that the amount I gave to my family should be in proportion to my earnings. When I earned $35 a week last summer, I thought $10 was enough to give in. My mother thinks I should give her all I earn and then ask her for the money I need. Some of it goes to furnishing the house and some to food. None is put in a savings account for me and I don't think this is fair. I know my parents are trying to keep me from saving more than a dollar a week so I won't get too independent. They have told me so. I do want that feeling of independence and what they are doing is killing my incentive to work."

(A) Get this matter straightened out with your parents at once. Surely they must realize that a girl of 17 is old enough to learn how to handle her money carefully. If she makes foolish expenditures, then her parents can point them out to her. A person is far less likely to spend foolishly the money she earns than the money given to her.

As for independence, you should be growing more and more independent every year. It won't be long now before you are an adult and, as such, you must be ready to manage your own affairs without having to depend too much on your parents. Naturally your parents do not want you to become so independent now that you will complicate matters at home. But, having some money in a savings account cannot make you so completely independent you could go off and live alone.

Have a frank talk with your parents about the whole matter of family finances. If your parents need your earnings to decorate your home—and you will certainly benefit from this when your friends and dates come to your home—then give it to them gladly and cut down on your savings temporarily. If, however, they do not need your help, urge them to save the money, in trust for you until you reach legal maturity.

Between Ourselves

By ELIZABETH FORBES

Yesterday . . . especially around the noon hour . . . it just wasn't my day!

I was shopping in a downtown store and decided to have lunch in its popular basement cafeteria. So, arms laden with parcels, I picked up a tray and joined the food line.

"Want a salad?" said the white-aproned young lady behind the counter. . . . "No!" I said, "Soup!" . . . She looked solemnly at me. . . . "Then, step out of line," she counseled, "go around this salad crowd. You'll get it faster."

"Bessie"

I stepped out of line . . . so did a big, broad-shouldered man in front of me. . . . We collided . . . my parcels flew in all directions. . . . "Excuse me!" he said, and went scrambling down on the floor to pick them up. . . . "That's all right", I said, as I went scrambling for the parcels, too. . . . Our trays got tangled up . . . our heads bumped. . . "Here they are," he said. He pushed the parcels into my arms and shrugged himself quickly back into the line.

Another white-aproned young woman looked at me over his shoulder. . . . "Rolls?" . . . she asked. . . . "No, soup," I repeated. . . . "Further up," she told me, so I continued along the outside of the line until I could see the soup.

Then came the problem of getting back to the counter . . . the tray, the parcels and me.

"Excuse me!" I said to a motherly-looking woman waiting for fish and chips. . . . She looked over her shoulder with a blank stare. . . . "Could I get in here?" I murmured to a tall, smartly dressed young matron. . . . She spread her elbows wide and glared at me. . . . "I'd like some vegetable soup," I whispered to a bright-eyed young girl, with a cigaret in her hand but she just looked straight ahead and ordered her vegetables.

The line moved along, with me on the outside looking in . . . and there was the big, broad-shouldered man again. He looked at me . . . and at my empty tray . . . then shrugged his shoulders resignedly and pushed back enough to let me into the line.

"Don't drop those parcels again," he warned . . . and suddenly we were both laughing.

That should be the end of the story . . . but as I told you in the beginning . . . it was one of those days!

Dollar Bill Lost, Only Cents Remain

Soup . . . piece of pie . . . a pot of tea . . . spoons and a fork were quickly added to my tray as I moved with the crowd. Then, the cashier loomed ahead. "Sixty-two cents!" she said in less time than it would take me to count to two.

Now, I knew I had a dollar bill somewhere . . . but did you ever try looking in a purse with your arms full of bundles, a line of people pushing you ahead and a cashier's hand waving frantically in front of you? I found a cent piece . . . a five-cent piece . . . five more cent pieces . . . but no dollar bill.

"What's the trouble?" said a second cashier, who was waiting impatiently for customers. . . . "No money!" said the cashier in front of me, with a resigned wave of her hands. "I have got money," I said defensively, as I scrambled into my purse.

"I mean no money READY!" said the cashier in front of me. By now I was dropping pennies into her hand as I found them. I could hear the broad-shouldered man heaving a big sigh. . . . I could see faces looking at me over his shoulders. . . . Perspiration beaded out on my forehead . . . my face was red. . . . But all I could find in my purse was cent pieces.

"Get her out of line," hissed the cashier up front. . . . "Move over there" . . . said the cashier in front of me.

Completely flustered by now . . . I scooped up all the small change I could find in my purse and handed it back to the cashier.

"There!" I said . . . "count that! If there's not enough, I'll give the soup back!"

"Here's your change!" she said . . . and handed me back . . . one cent.

I grasped it and crept off into a far corner . . . with my tray, my soup and my parcels and dived a hand into my coat pocket to get a handkerchief to wipe my fevered brow.

And what did I find? . . . The dollar bill, of course!

I told you in the beginning it just wasn't my day!

Carey, C.I.O. secretary-treasurer, and Alan S. Haywood, executive vice-president of the C.I.O. Labor leaders from all sections of the U.S. Thursday attended the funeral of Murray at Pittsburgh. CITY 'LIT UP' FROM NOV. 20

Spirit of Santa Claus hovered over City Council meeting Thursday.

Tourist trade group of the Chamber of Commerce had requested that decorative lights on city streets be lit from November 20 on through the Yuletide season.

Street lighting committee sympathized but Chairman Donald Smith was advised by Ken Reid, city electrical engineer there was no money in the coffers for the lighting.

Council agreed to allot the $254 necessary to keep Victoria bright and in the festive spirit.

Hostel Committee May Call Meeting

The special City Council committee named to study problem of a hostel for servicemen was given the go-ahead at Thursday's council meeting to call a parley of all persons interested in establishment of a hostel.

Ald. Jim Neely, chairman, said he did not feel the city would be in a position to put up the required $175,000 to $250,000.

He did believe that the city should take the lead insofar as getting all interested organizations together. From such a conference, a permanent chairman could be named, he said.

Lutheran Tells Council Churches Should Leave Legislation Alone

LONDON, Ont., Nov. 14 (CP)—The Canadian Council of Churches was told today by a Lutheran observer that immigration, housing and other similar matters are none of its business and it has no right to send resolutions to the government about them.

The Luthern Church is not a full member of the Council of Churches and therefore has no vote.

Rev. C. H. Whitteker of Bridgewater, N.S., didn't believe it was the church's job to interfere with legislation. The church should be an authority on salvation, he said, "but that's all."

Council passed a resolution urging the federal government to step up immigration of unsettled persons in Europe and to offer greater encouragement for emigration from the British Isles. At the same time it appealed to churches to take seriously their responsibility in a placement plan for European refugees sponsored by the Council of Churches.

Dr. Whitteker said that when the church enters political sphere it speaks without authority.

Canadian Families Rise by 700,000

B.C. Average Family Group Reported To Be Smallest of Nation; But Up by 100,000

OTTAWA, Nov. 14 (CP)—The number of families in Canada increased by almost 700,000 in the last 10 years, but the size of the average family declined.

British Columbia showed up as the province with the smallest average family, a position she held in 1941. The number of families increased to 299,000 from 199,000, but the size of the average slipped to 3.3 from 3.4.

The Bureau of Statistics today reported that the number of families climbed to 3,207,000 in 1951 from 2,525,000 in 1941. In that same period Canada's total population jumped to 14,000,000 from 11,500,000.

During the decade the size of the average family slipped to 3.7 from 3.9 persons. The trend towards smaller families was evident in every province except Newfoundland.

In Ontario, where the number of families increased to 1,162,000 from 909,000, the size of the average family dropped to 3.4 persons from 3.6.

In Quebec, traditional nome of the large family, the number of families increased to 856,000 from 647,000 but the average size slipped to 4.2 from 4.5.

With this decline, Newfoundland outranked Quebec as the province with the largest average family. The numbers in Canada's newest province increased to 74,000 from 68,000, but the size of the average family remained unchanged at 4.4 persons.

In Prince Edward Island, the number of families increased to 21,000 from 19,000 and the size slipped to four persons from 4.2. Nova Scotia's families increased to 145,000 from 123,000, but the size dropped to 3.9 from four.

New Brunswick's families increased to 111,000 from 93,000 and the size dropped to 4.1 from 4.3.

N.Y. Trading Volume Gains

NEW YORK, Nov. 14 (AP).—Stocks put on another mixed performance in today's market.

Price movements were sluggish despite an upturn in trading volume that carried the day's total to around 1,600,000 shares.

Lower tendencies in some of the major oil, steel and rail issues were too much for isolated strength of a few favorites to overcome.

Higher stocks included Douglas Aircraft, United Aircraft, General Electric (at a new high), DuPont, Allied Chemical, Goodyear and Sears Roebuck.

Down were Sinclair Oil, Texas Co., Gulf Oil, Southern Pacific, Dow Chemical, General Motors and International Nickel.

Canadian issues were mixed. Hiram Walker gained ½, Distillers Seagram advanced ⅛, and McIntyre was up one point. Canadian Pacific and International Nickel each dropped ⅜; Dome Mines was unchanged.

On the curb, Giant Yellowknife and Royalite Oil both slipped ⅛; Lake Shore was unchanged.

Toronto Lower

TORONTO, Nov. 14 (CP).—Prices continued weak today toward the stock market's close.

Volume for the session was expected to reach 1,450,000 shares.

Industrials showed a majority of losses although the exchange's index gained slightly as some leading issues advanced. Papers, utilities and manufacturing companies were weak but banks gained strength.

Western oil losses outnumbered gains about four to one, with losses ranging to 25 cents and gains to 10 cents.

Several gains spotted a generally lower base metals list. Ascot, Eastern Metals, Mayor and Silver Miller added pennies in active trading while American Yellowknife slipped. Cassiar was strong.

Senior golds gained some strength toward the close but juniors continued weak. Prospects held firm although Larder U made little headway in a turnover of 108,000 shares. Conwest gained. Holding companies slipped slightly after a firm day.

Montreal Quiet

MONTREAL, Nov. 14 (CP).—Stocks followed an irregularly lower price path in quiet dealings late today on the stock exchange and curb market.

Senior metals led the decline. Papers, senior oils, carriers and steels also showed a weak tendency. Abitibi, McColl-Frontenac, B.A. Oil, C.P.R., Canada Steamship and Massey-Harris sold lower.

Banks were better while miscellaneous industrials were mixed. Utilities and beverages were unchanged.

Western oils continued unchanged in light volume. Mines were up a trifle. Cassiar added 45 cents at $5.70 and United Asbestos jumped 10 cents to $2.45.

Industrial volume was 34,000 shares and mines 145,900.

Vancouver Irregular

VANCOUVER, Nov. 14.—Noon. Stock prices were a mixture of moderate gains and losses in light turnover at Vancouver exchange in the early session today.

In the oils, Calvan was off 5 to $5.60; Home $12¼; Continental $1.40, off 6; United $1.45, up 3.

In the mines Pacific Nickel slipped back to 85c; Quatsino 60c; Western Uranium $4.65.

Canadian Western Lumber traded at $9¼.

London Strong

LONDON, Nov. 14 (Reuters)—The stock market today had a firm undertone.

Most government securities moved slightly higher and there was a general rise of about six pence in better industrials. Store and provision groups went ahead. Textiles and motors were aided by the prospect of some relaxation in the Australian import ban but gains were pruned by profit-taking.

German potash bonds featured foreign bonds on prospects of early talks in connection with the settlement of claims. Anglo-Iranian were firm among oils with a rise of three-sixteenths of a point.

South African gold shares and diamonds were depressed but coppers were steady.

LONDON, Nov. 14 (AP)—Stock closings: Babcock & Wilcox 66s 9d. Boots Pure Drug 20s. Canadian Pacific $58¼. Central Mining £1 9/16. Consolidated Goldfields 40s. Courtaulds 37s 10½d. Hudson's Bay Co. 86s 3d. Imperial Chemical 44s 4½d. Imperial Tobacco 55s 10½d. Metal Box 86s 3d. Mexican Eagle 22s 7½d. Rand Mines 72s 6d.

Bonds: British 2½s Consols £60½. British 3½s War Loans £78 1/16. British Fundings 4s 1960-1990 £97½.

MONTREAL, Nov. 14 (CP).—The strength of the Montreal bond markets centred in convertibles on the corporate market with C.P.R. 3½'s, B.A. Oil and Interprovincial Pipe Lines up fractions.

Lumber Sales Gaining

By BURKE CAHILL, Times Business Editor

The squeeze of tighter foreign markets is being softened for some B.C. lumber men by a brighter outlook for domestic sales.

Cahill

Shares of Canadian Western Lumber Company have been moving up strongly in the stock markets lately, bucking a generally lower trend. C.W.L. has been one of the most active and aggressive lumber firms in developthe home market.

Strength of the company's stock is believed due to a better chance for a higher dividend (up to 60 cents from 50 cents per share) shortly. In turn, this results from the firm's healthy sales outlook.

C.W.L. has a major interest in the new $22,000,000 newsprint mill at Elk Falls and the recent higher U.S. dollar rate will boost the newsprint firm's revenue since sales are mostly in the U.S.

But the strength of the company's shares appear to be solidly based on longer range accomplishments in developing sales in Canada.

WIDER SALES

The company has built up one of the largest sales and distribution organizations in the field with a string of 95 lumber yards throughout western Canada. The range of products has also been widened to supply processed lumber and building materials to the Canadian construction industry.

As the B.C. government's industrial bulletin for November notes, earlier forecasts indicated that residential building in western Canada would fall off greatly this year.

But latest records of new building show that while home construction got off to a slow start there is every sign that total value and number of dwelling units for 1952 will at least equal last year's figures, the bulletin reports.

Commercial and industrial construction is also expected to maintain a high level. End of steel allocations is in sight, according to a survey Thursday by Iron Age, U.S. steel industry publication. Canada gets roughly one-third of her steel from the States and the prospect of larger supplies will permit a start on many building projects which have been held up.

So it looks like an active period immediately ahead in the construction industry in western Canada. Lumber firms solidly entrenched in the home market should enjoy good business.

All the big B.C. lumber operators, including C.W.L. have, of course, a heavy stake in the British, U.S. and other world markets. But more intensive development of domestic sales and a wider range of production are helping to offset complete dependence on outside buyers.

British Columbia tree fruits' fight for better freight rates in moving the 1953 crop to market has resulted in a favorable adjustment.

C. E. Jefferson, vice-president of the Canadian Pacific Traffic Department, told the organization that railways will move 1953 soft fruits from Okanagan points to Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta on a basis not higher than rates in effect at that time from Wenatchee, Washington, to the same points.

Rates will also be considered for fruit moving west from Ontario to keep in line with shipping charges from the Okanagan to the same points. For some time, rates have been lower from Wenatchee to Eastern Canadian markets than those from the Okanagan.

COMMONS BATTLE LOOMS

C.C.F. Attitude on N.A.T.O. Unchanged

Military Vs. Economic Objectives of Atlantic Pact Expected to Spark Fall Session Debate

By JAMES R. NELSON
British United Press Staff Correspondent

OTTAWA, Nov. 14 (BUP)—The traditional tranquility of foreign affairs debates in the Commons is likely to be shattered in the new session of Parliament opening Thursday by a three-way fight over Canada's program of arms and economic aid to foreign states.

Informed parliamentary circles said the government and the Progressive Conservative opposition probably would stand united on basic principles of foreign policy.

A marked division, however, is expected to be created by the 13-man socialist C.C.F. group. It is critical of the extent to which Canada and her North Atlantic allies have committed themselves to military spending, to the detriment—the C.C.F. says—of economic aid to depressed areas.

Observers said injection of the C.C.F. argument into what otherwise would be a bipartisan attitude by the Liberal and Conservative groups probably will set both against the C.C.F. and may even pit the Liberals and Conservatives against each other.

Arms Goal Said 'Unrealistic'

The argument first rose during the 1952 session of parliament. The C.C.F. national executive said then that N.A.T.O.'s military goals were unrealistic and that Canada should contribute more to the economic recovery of stricken areas.

Since the end of last session in July, C.C.F. national leader M. J. Coldwell issued a statement reiterating his stand. Concerning reports from Paris that N.A.T.O. was to be asked to set a goal of 75 divisions in Europe, he said "the military and economic objectives of N.A.T.O. are going to be thrown into even greater unbalance."

"The non-military objectives of N.A.T.O. are being almost totally ignored," he said. "While the evidence grows that Russia is going to concentrate her fight on the economic front, N.A.T.O. is going to pursue its unrealistic military objectives at the continued sacrifice of the economic strength and needs of the western world.

"There can be only one result: a weakening of the overall defense position of the West in face of the threat from Soviet imperialism."

External Affairs Minister Lester B. Pearson, then chairman of the North Atlantic council of ministers, strenuously objected to this sort of criticism last session. He said there was a "real danger" that the policy expounded by the C.C.F. "will play straight into the hand of Communist propaganda."

In last spring's debate on the subject, the Progressive Conservatives stayed aloof from the Coldwell-Pearson argument.

However, there were indications here in advance of the new session that when the issue is again raised—as it will be on the basis of the C.C.F.'s new statement last month—the Conservatives will find it harder not to take sides.

A Conservative party spokesman said today his group was "solidly" in support of bipartisan foreign policy initiated by the government. Conservative M.P.s who have watched the current session of the United Nations general assembly, at which opposition foreign affairs critic Gordon Graydon (P.C., Peel) has been present as a parliamentary observer, have found no major point of policy on which to differ with the government.

When the issue comes up in the Commons in the next few weeks, however, the Conservatives will have to take a stand publicly, and expectations here were that they would support the government on broad issues of foreign policy.

Even with the C.C.F. criticism, it was stated, there is not likely to be a major breakdown in all-party agreement on the broad principles of Canadian foreign policy.

New School's Detail Before Board Monday

Final details will be completed for the proposed new Macdonald Park elementary school at a meeting of Greater Victoria School Board Monday night, it is expected.

If the board approves the plan a contract will likely be let within the next few days. J. F. K. English, senior municipal inspector of schools said today.

Nine tenders were received Thursday and opened. Some were below the figure allowed in the by-law.

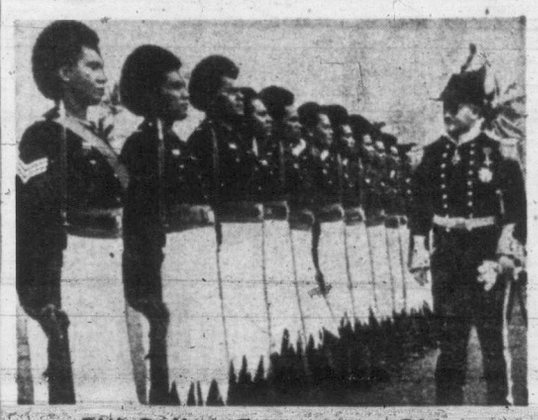

The tenders were taken to the department of education today for their approval. The department meets half the cost.

G'RL'S WHIM SENDS YOUTH ON 14-STATE VACATION

LINCOLN, Neb. (UP).—District Judge John L. Polk abruptly ended an impromptu 14-state vacation for Carl Summers, 24.

Summers was sentenced to 18 months in the Nebraska Reformatory.

He rented a car from a Lincoln garaage to take his girl to a picnic. En route, he said, she told him she had never been in Chicago, so they decided to go. They also went to New York, Washington, D.C., and New Jersey, where he wrecked the car.

TOO MANY WANT 'DESK JOBS'

Youth With Vision Need of Industry

QUEBEC CITY, Nov. 14 (BUP)—Too many young Canadians want quiet desk jobs and too few are "excited by big visions" of what can be done with the nations' natural resources, a paper company executive said Thursday night.

Vernon E. Johnson, vice-president and general manager of the International Paper Company, told the annual meeting of the Quebec Association of Forestry Engineers that "we've got to be better—very much better—than we are today."

Good young men are coming from the universities and elsewhere, but "too often the young men I see are looking for quiet desk jobs," Johnson said in an appeal for stepped-up resources development.

"They are thinking of social security and retirement plans and too few of them want to face the challenge of industry," he said. "Too few of them are excited by big visions of what can be done.

"I am thinking about the crying need in our field—as in many fields—for men who can question the old ways and imagine new ways."

Johnson said the pulp and paper industry, one of the richest in the world, already had big responsibilities. "But more than that, we have got to think ahead to ward the future of a greatly expanding Canada and an expanding world of which we, as a nation, are an increasingly important part," he said.

Churchman Wonders If Bible Truth Wanted

TORONTO, Nov. 14 (CP).—Do people want the truth in the Bible—or what they are familiar with?

The question was raised Thursday by Dr. Luther A. Weigle at a luncheon here. As chairman of the standard Bible committee, Dr. Weigle has guided a committee of 22 leading scholars—four of them Canadian—for 16 years. It is trying to revise the King James and American standard versions of the Bible in the light of newly discovered manuscripts.

Dr. Weigle said in an address that the King James version was based on eight mediaeval manuscripts. It contained mistakes, substitutions and additions. In the last 75 years more than 2,000 additional manuscripts have been unearthed.

Many words used in translation now have entirely different meanings. He quoted from the original Greek text of the sermon on the mount: "Your Father which seeth in secret will reward you." Old translators, unable to resist the desire to embellish, added the word "openly." Sixteen such additions were made in the King James version.

In the original Greek manuscripts Jesus was called "Teacher" 14 times, but the King James version translators changed the word to "Master" in all cases but one.

WINGLESS AIRCRAFT PILOT 'DOESN'T LIKE FEEL OF IT'

SANTA ANA, Calif., Nov. 14 (AP)—A wingless airplane that some folks might mistake for a flying saucer had a test flight Thursday. It lasted only about two minutes at a 50-foot altitude and ended in a plowed field.

The plane's builder and pilot on the first flight, William E. Horton, 36, said: "I didn't like the feel of it."

His odd-looking ship has a wide, flat fuselage, and no wings, with stubby eight-foot control flaps on either side. It is 26 feet wide and 40 feet long. The fuselage is virtually a wing in itself.

C.C.F. Speaker Says Canada Not Told About Saskatchewan

(Special to The Times)

PENTICTON.—Canadian newspapers have thrown a "paper curtain" around Saskatchewan in an effort to keep from Canadians reports about the growing development of that province's natural resources, Highways Minister J. T. Douglas of Saskatchewan said here this week.

Speaking at a meeting in support of C.C.F. candidate H. S. Kenyon, Mr. Douglas said $30,000,000 to $50,000,000 will be spent in exploration work in his province.

Discussing the achievements of the C.C.F. government in Saskatchewan, Mr. Douglas said: "We have the best hospital insurance plan and the best car insurance scheme with the widest coverage in Canada."

Frank Snowsell, Saanich M.L.A. and C.C.F. organizer, told the gathering Social Credit wants to turn back the wheels of progress.

"Despite all the Social Credit claims, taxes and debts in Alberta have risen sharply. Municipal debts have increased from $42,000,000 to $116,000,000 in Alberta, while at the same time in Saskatchewan they have decreased by $10,000,000," he said.

Mr. Finlayson, an R.C.A.F. pilot in the Second World War, will be supported at the convention by a strong group opposing a rumored proposal that Mr. Anscomb retain party leadership.

A new leadership bid by Mr. Anscomb, who has said he would resign at the convention, would create another row within the party, highly placed Tories contend. Mr. Anscomb, however, has made no comment on reports that he may seek to retain the leadership.

Another prominently mentioned leadership candidate is Davie Fulton, Kamloops M.P. But Mr. Fulton hasn't given any indication that he is interested.

Mr. Finlayson is a partner in the Nanaimo real estate and insurance firm of Evans and Finlayson.

He was campaign manager for Dr. Larry Giovando, who was elected to the Legislature in Nanaimo in the June election. Mr. Finlayson is president of the Nanaimo branch of the Canadian Legion, president of the Nanaimo and Islands P.C.'s, and a vice-president of the B.C. body.

Unswept Chimneys Likely to Remain So for Long Time

Victoria is currently plagued with too many chimneys or too few chimney sweeps.

This was pointed up earlier this week by a court case in which a citizen was fined $5 for having a dirty chimney; a subsequent survey of the situation showed that all chimney sweeps in the city have work scheduled for from weeks to months ahead.

"We are booked up until the middle of January," said one firm. "We had to start turning people down back in September."

Another reported he can do only five jobs a day now, because of the early winter darkness, but had at least 50 calls a day during October.

A woman in charge of her husband's office said he is working until 7.30 every night, six days a week, and even has to work Sundays to keep up with the most urgent pleas to have chimneys swept.

We've been booked ahead since September," she said. "It happens every year. Instead of having chimneys cleaned in the summer, people wait until the fall and then have to wait for weeks."

Council Approves Plan To Meet Debt Increase

City Council Thursday approved a finance committee recommendation to ask the voters' assent to the setting aside of $35,000 annually to meet a sharp increase in debt charges in 1963.

Aldermen approved also the investing of the $202,500 received from sale of the grain elevator, in securities authorized for municipalities.

Egypt Plans Steel Output

CAIRO, Nov. 14 (Reuters)—Egypt Wednesday night announced plans to create a steel industry of her own, using hydro-electric power from the Nile River and ore from upper Egypt. A government spokesman said bids for the construction of the plant will be received on an international basis.

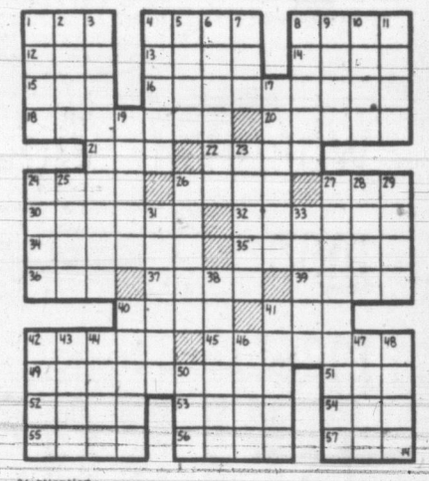

EARLY MEETING WITH IKE URGED

LONDON, Nov. 14 (Reuters). Prime Minister Churchill will be urged in the House of Commons next week to arrange an early meeting with President-elect Eisenhower of the United States.

In a parliamentary question issued Thursday, Labor member Arthur Lewis asked whether, with a view to discussing international affairs and cementing and improving Anglo-American relations, Churchill has made any approach to Eisenhower. Lewis will pose the question next Wednesday.

Justice Arrested With 5 Others in Poker Game

DAYTONA, Tenn., Nov. 14 (AP)—A judge tried himself and five others on gaming counts here Thursday and dismissed the charges.

Sessions Judge Harold S. Duncan was one of six men arrested last night in a poker game, Sheriff Mack Thurman reported.

Duncan said Wednesday night he was not arrested—"only told to come in."

"I presided at the hearing, and charges against all six cited, including myself, were dismissed," he said.

Circuit Judge Alan S. Kelly at South Pittsburgh, Tenn., said he has asked the district attorney-general's office to investigate the matter.

Duncan said each of the other five "testified they were not playing poker but were playing rummy. They also said I was not playing."

Thurman said the arrests were made by his chief deputy who was sent to get a warrant from Duncan, "who had been seen at the game."

The warrant was for three men from whom Thurman and a deputy had just confiscated 21 slot machines, the sheriff said.

Duncan ordered the slot machines returned to their owners Wednesday, but Judge Kelly said he had revoked Duncan's order and this will be investigated also.

Geese Fair Game If Off Sanctuary And in Season

There is no law to stop hunters from shooting geese which leave the bird sanctuary of Elk Lake, Joe Jones, provincial game warden, said today.

The warden was replying to complaints that hunters have been shooting in the vicinity of Royal Oak Canada geese which winter at the Elk Lake bird sanctuary.

"The birds are only protected at Elk Lake," said the game warden. "Once they leave the area hunters can shoot them during the hunting season."

He said there are about 100 geese wintering at the lake.

City Clerk Frank Hunter was named returning officer for the civic election December 11, at city council meeting Thursday. Percy Wright, assistant city clerk, was named deputy returning officer. Nomination day was set for December 4 from 12 noon until 2 p.m.

Radical Changes Noticed in New Chrysler Group on View Saturday

By DON INGHAM

Someone in the Chrysler Corporation took a long look at its products, did a good deal of thinking, then sat down at a drawing board.

The result — four brand-new cars will be unveiled in Victoria Saturday when the 1953 Plymouth, Dodge, DeSoto and Chrysler will be up for inspection by the buying public.

Both manufacturers and the Victoria dealers like to say "there's nothing the same but the tire sizes," but that is going a little too far. They still look like cars, although exceptionally smart ones, and still have four wheels and the engines in front.

In other words, although the appearance to the eye is fine, they have to be driven to be appreciated.

When seated at the wheel one notices that he is actually sitting —not half lying on the back of his neck. Seats have been raised two and one-half inches and the windshield is deeper, even though the over-all heights of all models has been reduced.

WINDSHIELDS TINTED

Windshields are made of tinted glass to cut glare and reduce eye-strain, and looking through the windshield the driver can see something that hasn't been visible from the driver's seat for years—the right front fender.

The dashboard has been moved forward to give more leg room in the front seat, and the steering wheel is low and well positioned for the hands and does not block vision. The lowered hood gives a clearer view of the road close to the car.

"Wrap-around" rear windows and slimmed-down door posts also help to make vision all around as close to 100 per cent as possible.

In all four models, glass area has been increased from 7 to 15 per cent. Rear seats have been widened at least eight inches by the elimination of arm rests from the body, and substitution of a combined arm rest and handle on the door.

All cars have safety-rim wheels that keep a tire from tearing off in case of a blow-out, thus permitting safe deceleration to a stop.

A quick look at the Plymouth reveals a car that has been shortened 4¾ inches to an over-all length of 189 inches, lowered 1½ inches, and lightened by 200 pounds to its present weight of 3,085 pounds.

Springs have been widened, but with fewer leaves, to give a crisper ride with less sway, and the rear end gear ratio has been lowered to make a happy compromise with high speed and adequate pick-up.

All outside shrinkage has been accomplished while making the car more spacious inside, and with an eye to improving mechanical performance.

NEW NAME CAR

Dodge, similar in almost all respects to the Plymouth, has a real cutie in its Coronet, a brand new car this year.

Filling a short front hood is a 90-degree V eight motor that will develop 140 horsepower, and the dealers claim it develops more power per cubic inch displacement than any other automobile engine on the market.

This sizzling little power plant is a baby brother of the 160-horsepower motor that powers the DeSoto Firedome and the even larger 180 horsepower engine in the swank Chrysler New Yorker.

A demonstration drive revealed that it is all the dealers say it is, and with the automatic transmission the driver can forget clutches and gearshift levers from one month to the next.

The popular fluid torque converter and powered steering are now optional on the DeSoto and six-cylindered Chrysler Windsor, and standard, as in 1952, on the New Yorker.

Powered steering takes four-fifths of the work of steering away from the driver, and the torque converter, by mechanical wizardy, constantly provides the correct tractive effort to suit the load, giving pick-up almost twice as fast as that noted with conventional drive.

COMPLETE REBUILD

All in all, the Chrysler Corporation has given its models a complete rebuild, from the axles up.

There are no radical departures, but instead an honest effort to make the cars more functional. Through better use of formerly wasted space lurking under seats, in fenders, under the hood, and in the body, the cars are roomier but more compact.

This promises better performance and economy through lighter weight, which eases tire and metal wear. It makes for a better looking car, because it looks more efficient.

Proper consideration has been given the driver, who can now see what he is doing instead of driving almost completely by "feel" and hope that no trouble lurks in the blind spots—a common hazard in many modern cars.

The local dealers, J. M. Wood Motors and Olson Motors, are justly proud of the new cars they have to sell, and feel they have the best products the Windsor factory has turned out to date.

Chrysler, in all its cars, has traditionally stayed away from extremes — the cheapest, the fastest, the most comfortable, the handsomest. Instead, it has preferred to give all features in their proper relation to one another.

The 1953 models still maintain this tradition, but come closer to the peak than ever before. They will press their competition very hard on just about every feature of "automotion."

ORPHANS COLLECT

HOUSTON, Tex. (UP). — Students at the Kentucky Female Orphan School at Midway, Ky., in the heart of the bluegrass region, are "silent partners" in Freeport Sulphur's new development at Nash dome in Texas County. The dome is on land that was willed to the school, and on every ton of sulphur extracted the school will get a royalty.

Castlegar Brief Suggests Beer for 18-Year-Olds

NELSON, B.C., Nov. 14 (CP)— One of four briefs put before the British Columbia Liquor Inquiry Commission here Thursday suggested 18-year-olds be admitted to beer parlors.

The recommendation that the age minimum be reduced from 21 years was included in a brief presented by the Castlegar Chamber of Commerce.

The organization said the June 12 B.C. liquor plebiscite result was a protest against present liquor laws and a demand for an entirely new approach to the question.

The brief submitted as its first objective the creation of a situation where reasonable quantities of beer, wines and liquors are available to persons wanting them in "reasonable places at reasonable prices."

ROAMING THROUGH

In the June plebiscite, British Columbians voted in favor of sale of liquor by the glass on a local option basis. The three-man commission, now roaming through the province's Interior, was appointed to investigate the best methods of establishing more liquor outlets.

Under present B.C. law, beer only is sold in taverns. Liquor can be purchased at government stores and in a few private clubs.

Nelson Ministerial Association urged that beer parlors be permitted to sell foods in preference to the extension of liquor sales privileges to cafes.

"And the Leaves Came Tumbling Down"

They're in the garage, they're up in the eaves, our joint is jumpin' with falling leaves. They're down my neck, they're up my sleeves, I'm knee-deep in crunchy leaves. Into the basement steal these thieves, to hide in the wood, we're choked with leaves. I gather them up, there comes a squall, it doesn't look, like I've raked at all. I light a fire under a heap, they smoke me out & make me weep. Great piles I dump in a wire corral, I'm deluged again in the interval. Changes the wind from off the shore, a further load from right next door. The rain pelts down, seems by design, they're weighted now, so I guess they are mine. I go at it again with my bamboo rake, my muscles hurt, & my back does ache. Your purse won't hurt, and you'll say "that's mine," these gorgeous rugs at just $99. They're 9 by 12, and it just could be, the underfelt . . . WE GIVE YOU FREE. The G.F. raps on the windowpane, points to the sun, gone is the rain. Out she comes & brings her broom, you'd think there was, no elbow-room. 'Cause both of us bump under the eaves, trying to swipe each other's leaves. I give her a shove, throw her a smile, she falls right in a great big pile. Right out of sight, does she go, so I dive in & we meet below. "You crazy fool, you great big clown," the leaves o'er us, came tumbling down. But not for long, that fall perfume, 'cause then she chased me with her broom. Around we went, around the garage, but she got lost in the smoke barr-age. Both of us here, gained reprieves, & then went back to raking leaves. Lovely leaves, big . . . nut-brown, that out in Oak Bay . . . COME TUMBLING DOWN.

BRIDGE LESSON

by Oswald Jacoby

About half of the bridge players in the "experts' room" at the Regency Club are famous bridge experts, but the other half are famous for other reasons. In the case of today's hand, North was a bridge player, and South was a novelist. This had something to do with both the bidding and the play.

North should have bid four spades instead of four hearts, of course, and would have done so if his partner had been a fellow expert. But South should have bid four spades instead of five diamonds. He shouldn't have gone past the 10-trick level.

West opened the three of clubs, and South won with the ace. South now proceeded to play the hand well enough—for a writer. He cashed the ace of diamonds and ruffed a diamond in the dummy.

Next he discarded two low diamonds on the king of clubs and the ace of hearts. He then returned to his hand by ruffing a heart and ruffed his last low diamond in the dummy. Now he had to return to his hand with another ruff, which left him with four trumps and the king of diamonds.

This would have been all right with a 3-2 trump break, but the actual 4-1 break was too much for declarer. South laid down the king of spades and continued with another spade. East took two spade tricks and made declarer ruff, whereupon East was sure of a third trump trick. South could not make his king of diamonds.

Opening lead—♣ 3

If the bridge player and the novelist had changed seats, the contract might have been only four spades to begin with. But even if the contract had been five spades, the expert would have found his way home.

The correct play, which a ranking bridge expert would see at a glance, is to cash both high diamonds at the very beginning and then ruff a diamond with the ace of trumps. South proceeds by discarding two diamonds on the ace of hearts and the king of clubs, after which he ruffs himself in and returns his last diamond to ruff with dummy's eight.

South will eventually give up two spade tricks, but those are the only tricks he will lose.

Business Tax Could Cut Four Mills Off Rate

Council Votes Down Move to Study Plan

Institution of a business tax in Victoria could mean a reduction of some four mills in the city tax rate, Ald. Donald Smith told city council meeting Thursday.

He urged that the whole matter be studied by finance committee with reports and recommendations to city council.

Council by a vote of 6-4 defeated Ald. Smith's motion to have the matter studied this year.

City Manager Cecil Wyatt advocated study of a business tax in a report on city finances submitted last February. The report was laid on the table for further study.

REPORT REVIVED

"At the last finance meeting the report was lifted from the table when the question of the city's capital indebtedness was discussed," Ald. Smith said.

No action, however, had been taken on considering the feasability of a business tax system for Victoria, he added.

He referred to revenues the city of Edmonton realizes

Cinerama Predicted for All Movie Houses Within 5 Years

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 14 (AP)—"Within five years, virtually every film theatre in the United States will be converted to three-dimensional movies."

These are strong words, but they come from one of Hollywood's soundest business heads, Merian C. Cooper. The movie man has made great early documentaries such as "Grass" and "Chang," and spectacles such as "King Kong." He now is general manager of the Cinerama Company.

Cinerama is the most important word in the Hollywood lexicon these days. Using a huge, curved screen and three projectors, Cinerama has brought new scope to the movies. It was hailed as a triumph in its New York debut last month.

BEAT TV

"Hollywood will now have to start thinking in new terms," Cooper remarked. "We are at the same place now as when sound came in. Television is getting better all the time, and we have to beat it somehow. The way to do it is with Cinerama, or some other device that will give added scope to the scene.

"Within 18 months we hope to have a Cinerama theatre in every major city in the United States. In five years, I foresee that most of the country's theatres will no longer be showing the flat-screen picture."

Louis B. Mayer, chairman of the Cinerama board, is responsible for lining up theatres. Cooper is in charge of production.

"I expect to start shooting a feature-length picture in the Cinerama process within 90 days," he reported. "I have others in preparation.

OUT OF FRAME

"Cinerama is the first form of entertainment to take the picture out of the frame. In the stage, the present movies and television, the picture is framed. But in the Cinerama, the screen is wide enough to encompass even your peripheral vision.

"The only other example I have ever seen of this is the Sistine Chapel art work of Michelangelo. If you get close enough to it, your entire vision takes in the picture."

Can Cinerama pictures be made as cheaply as regular films?

"In some cases, more cheaply. You will need more lighting, because the three lenses take in the whole set. But also you do not need to make new set-ups for medium shots and close-ups. The whole scene can be shot from the same position."

TURNS TO SERIOUS WRITING

Novelist Living in B.C. Once Wrote Book a Week

BY CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK, Nov. 14 (AP)—Whatever your opinion of the work of novelist Rosamund Marshall, who writes lusty, busty best sellers with titles like "Duchess Hotspur", She's a novelist without peer in terms of quantity production.

For quite some time Miss Marshall, who lives in Vancouver, B.C., wrote at the incredible rate of a novel a week, using a minimum of five pen names.

She's a forthright and attractive blonde who faces life with enthusiasm and obvious relish. Currently she is a little subdued—nerves probably—due to the fact that she's written her first novel in a modern setting and hung it on a serious theme. Called "Bond of the Flesh," It's set for November publication by Doubleday.

MANY NAMES

Miss Marshall attempted to explain her record-breaking novel output. "I was married to an Italian and living in Rome at the time," she said. "I'd always wanted to write and I was pretty bored with Roman society and playing bridge. I met a French publisher at a cocktail party. He put out dime novels, sold by peddlers from village to village. He said he was having trouble getting material, so I just asked him if I could try.

"I think I was paid something like $25 for each one, but I turned out a novel a week for him. One week it would be a passionate love story, and then a Chinatown piece. Once I did a whole series of sheik stories. I had a different name for each type of story.

"It was very good training for me. I learned to write fast, I learned how to plot, and I learned how to keep a story down to the essentials and not pad it out."

When her marriage broke up, Miss Marshall returned to her native New York where her novels really came in handy.

"I arrived with my daughter, a mink coat and $50," she recalls. "When the money was gone, I walked—with the mink coat—into a pulp magazine publisher's office. For a good long time I made a fair living translating my French dime novels into English and selling them to the magazine."

SPOKE FIVE LANGUAGES

One of her problems was learning how to write in English. She had been living a nomadic life in Europe—daughter of an oil engineer—since she was 12. She spoke five languages and some dialects, but English wasn't her best subject.

She drifted into writing historical novels—the kind with the exciting cover illustrations—in an effort to make more money and a better living. She was a natural, using European backgrounds she knew well and letting the action carry the story. Her books sold well and still do, although she's never been nominated for any fancy writing awards.

Now, however, she's turned serious book writer. Her new experiment explores the rigid American caste system in a mid-western community.

"However," she said, with a sly look, "I've also signed with another publisher to do a series of detective stories. Under another name. Just in case. . . ."

TWO for the SHOW

By PHIL LEE

AA (Oscar class) A (Don't Miss) BB (Worthwhile) (B for Rainy Days) C (To put in time)

(BB) SOMEBODY LOVES ME (Royal)—Many long years ago when I was pink-cheeked and used to dance to the music of Vincent Lopez I remember the old maestro saying "And now our singer—Miss Betty Hutton."

Those of us who saw her that night singing "Three Little Fishes" can never forget her. She rode the mike like a horse. Dressed in red rompers, her golden hair in two long braids with little red bows, she panicked the huge house. She was a whirlwind and a typhoon all rolled into one. We didn't know it but we were watching a girl taking her gamble on fame and fortune. Now she has both.

But Betty Hutton should still stick to the whoop-de-do. I could never see her as an actress. And after watching her at the Royal last night playing the role of beginning-of-the-century torch singer Blossom Seeley in "Somebody Loves Me," I still can't see her. Oh why doesn't somebody wake up and give her another "Annie Get Your Gun," which was, to my mind, her best since her bouncy heyday!

"Somebody Loves Me" could have been so nostalgic, coming from the era it did. But did Betty or Ralph Meeker (playing the part of Benny Fields) make with the warmth of old melodies? No, sirree! For the most part the tunes were pretty well run of the mill.

The plot, inspired by the true saga of Blossom Seeley and Benny Fields, was mainly that Blossom, an established star, married flop Benny. At first she is only the boy's meal ticket then he does actually fall in love, leaves her to go and become a star on his own, and win back his self-respect.

Best in the cast were Robert Keith, as Blossom's agent; and down-to-earth-talking Billie Bird as Blossom's wry-faced Girl Friday. I liked the new tune "Love Him."

"Somebody Loves Me," in summary, is the perfect example of what disappoints me most . . . A musical without some good topnotch songs.

Optimist Club Wins Thanks From Council

Alderman Margaret Christie brought greetings from Mayor Claude Harrison and the city council to the Optimist Club weekly get-together at the Pacific Club Thursday. This is "Optimist Week."

Mrs. Christie thanked the Optimists for their generosity in regard to the Coal Harbor Road Juvenile Detention Home. She outlined the struggle by the authorities to have the home set up. Previous to its inception, delinquent youths under 18 were compelled to go to city jail.

When the building was first obtained, said Mrs. Christie, the basement had only a mud floor. The Victoria Optimists have been responsible for laying floors, providing furnishings, and the wives of the service club members hung curtains, drapes and made cushions.

Any child who now must wait in custody for the once-weekly sitting of the Juvenile Court is assured of pleasant surroundings.

Mrs. Christie praised the work of Col. W. Dingley, superintendent of the home. He is also an Optimist.

Troop Morale Bad, Declares Chaplain Head

—The morale of Canada's 27th Brigade in Germany is very bad, Rev. W. H. Young of Toronto, chairman of the chaplain service of the Canadian Council of Churches, charged Thursday.

Dr. Young told a council meeting that the government was aware that general welfare conditions in the brigade were bad, and so was morale, but because of the touchy situation of either choosing one of four welfare agencies or none, had chosen none and left the army to take care of itself.

The defense department's attitude, Dr. Young said, was that all four welfare agencies—Y.M.-C.A., Knights of Columbus, Salvation Army and Red Cross—could not be sent to Europe to look after a single brigade. He said that left only army welfare officers to concern themselves with the welfare needs of the troops.

6 Burn to Death In Nanaimo Fire

Compiled From C.P. Dispatches

NANAIMO, B.C., Nov. 14 (CP)—Heroism and tragedy stalked hand-in-hand here early this morning when gale-whipped winds carried fire through an Indian Reserve house, killing a fisherman and his wife and three of their six children.

Victims of the blaze, believed started by an over-heated stove, were 37-year-old fisherman Max Thomas, his wife, his brother James, 32, and three children, Elsie, 4, Max Jr. 2 and Patricia, 6 months.

Mrs. Thomas, 35, was the daughter of Chris Paul, well-known resident of the West Saanich Indian Reserve.

The fire, which broke out at a reported 2.40 a.m., was fanned by 45-mile-per-hour winds. In no time the frame building was an inferno. In this nightmare, 11-year-old Clifford kept his head. He rescued nine-year-old sister Masie and, afterwards, eight-year-old Marilyn. He would have rescued more but flames and dense smoke forced him back from the rooms of the others. After dropping Masie and Marilyn through a flame-encircled window he dropped to safety himself.

CHECKED FLAMES

Firemen checked the flames and halted the spread of fire to a nearby woods. Other houses on the reserve escaped damage.

"I thought I heard my father call," said Clifford. "But I could not reach his room."

His parents and the baby were in a room at the rear of the house.

Clifford was forced to jump from a window. He ran to the back of the house but when he opened the door he found the kitchen a mass of flames.

At dawn firemen started search of the fire-blackened debris for bodies. Hours later only three had been found. The others were buried deep in the ruins.

"There was so much wreckage we could only find three of them," a fireman reported.

The Indian reserve is just outside the city limits.

INVESTIGATION LAUNCHED

All available Nanaimo firemen were called to fight the blaze, but were unable to approach close enough to the dwelling to save it.

Police and fire officials have launched an investigation.

58-Mile Winds Strike

Telephone wires and power lines and those they serve were the chief victims of the city's first fall windstorm that reached a peak average velocity of 51 miles per hour between 7 and 8 a.m. today. tween 7 and 8 a.m. today after blowing more than 24 hours.

Highest velocity recorded overnight was 58 miles.

According to the weather forecast, the wind will slacken off late today, and by Saturday will be variable at about 15 miles per hour.

Many trees were blown down.

A tree that crashed on Finnerty Road caused a power failure in Gordon Head, and kept CJVI off the air until 9.32 a.m. instead of its customary morning start at 6 a.m.

Cordova Bay, portions of Saanich, and a large area in Brentwood also were "blacked out" as power lines were severed by wind damage, and Frank Hobbs School at Cadboro Bay was closed for the day.

B.C. Electric officials reported maintenance crews went to work immediately, and hoped to have power restored throughout the area by early afternoon.

Damage was spread equally throughout Greater Victoria.

Four trees blew down shortly before 8 a.m. across the back porch at the home of J. A. Harris, 1223 Bewdley Avenue, Esquimalt, and H. R. Fletcher, 1482 Dallas Road, reported a window smashed.

In the city a number of street lights were broken by powerful gusts, and Wilson and Lenfesty reported a sign torn from its moorings at their Government Street sporting goods store.

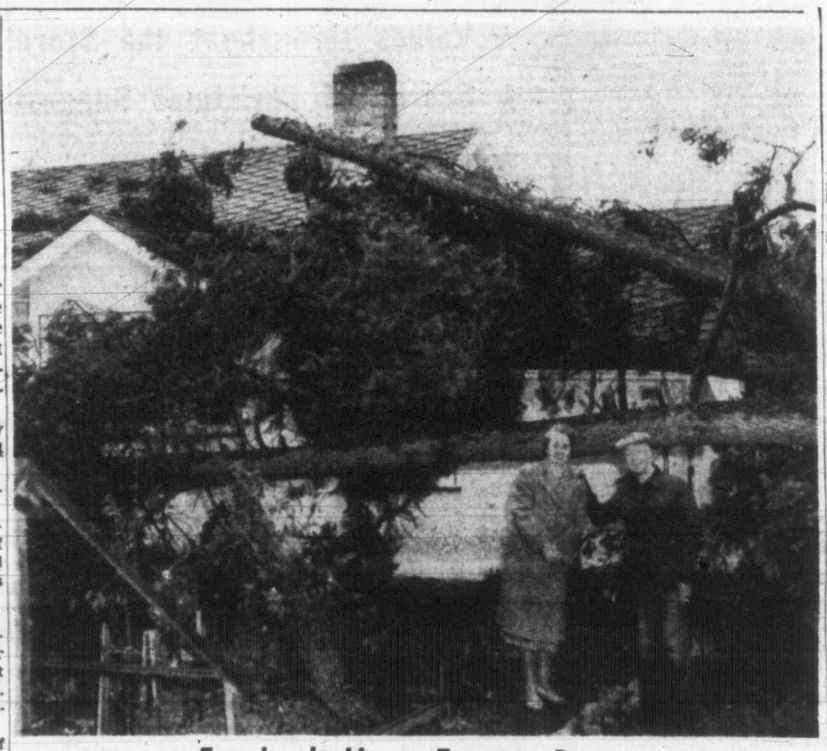

Central Saanich Police Chief Vernon Lawley reported several trees down in Saanich and Central Saanich, and two telephone poles across Central Saanich Road.

Oak Bay firemen were called at 5.55 a.m. to a brush fire caused by the power line break at Finnerty Road, and made a later trip to the scene before the fire was extinguished.

Shingles were reported from scattered points in the district as flying in the air as numerous as leaves—having been ripped from both new and old houses by sudden gusts.

Ss. Princess Elizabeth arrived here on time from Vancouver at 7 a.m. today after one of the roughest crossings in years.

Ships have kept to sheltered waters, and neither the Gordon Head government wireless station or Salvage King, which monitors the distress frequency, has heard trouble reports.

Esquimalt Home Escapes Damage

Hidden behind once-standing timber is modern home of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Harris, 1223 Bewdley, Esquimalt, that narrowly missed being wrecked when trees crashed under gale shortly before 8 a.m. today. "It could have been worse," said Mr. and Mrs. Harris as they prepared to clean up mess. Although trees brushed house and one fell across roof, no damage was done.

Total of 43 Years For 6 Men, Woman

VANCOUVER, Nov. 14 (CP)—Sentences totalling 43 years in penitentiary, 50 strokes of the paddle, and $6,000 in fines were handed down in Assize Court today to six men and a woman, convicted on narcotics charges involving teen-agers.

Mr. Justice A. M. Manson, announcing the sentence, said that "to start a girl on drugs is a particularly vicious thing to do."

Four of the convicted men will serve terms of seven years each, pay $1,000 fines or serve an additional year, and receive 10 strokes of the paddle.

They are Robert Woods, 20; William Ainsworth, 28; Calder Hurlburt, 20, and James P. Mason, 28.

James Bergnach, 19, and Henry White, 25, each was sentenced to five years and fined $500 and five strokes of the paddle.

Patricia Bagstad, convicted of selling narcotics, was sentenced to two years at Kingston Penitentiary, and fined $200 or an additional two months.

James Kazmer, 32, and Colvin Currie, 22, each was sentenced to seven years and 10 strokes of the paddle, and fined $1,000 or an additional year.

Gwendoline Thornington, 24, was sentenced to Kingston Penitentiary for two years and fined $200 or two additional months.

Charles Reginald Martin, 44, convicted of attempting to murder his wife in Powell River last April 29, was sentenced to 15 years in prison.

Alexander Jack was given one year on a manslaughter charge which arose from the traffic death of William Henry Carr in Vancouver Aug. 26.

Norman Roy Pollard, 26, was sentenced to four years on a statutory charge, and William Seguin, 27, to three years for receiving stolen goods.

Drew Denies Similarity With Socreds

Progressive Conservative leader George Drew labelled as "utter nonsense" the contention that his party and the Social Credit Party have similar philosophies, on his arrival in Victoria today.

On a two-day tour of Vancouver Island centres, Mr. Drew was met at the C.P.R. dock at 8 a.m. today by Major-Gen. G. R. Pearkes, V.C., M.P. for Nanaimo.

He called on Premier W. A. C. Bennett at the Legislative Buildings and paid his respects to Lieut.-Governor Clarence Wallace at Government House during the morning.

Mr. Drew addressed members of V.I. United Services Institute at Bay Street Armory, watched preliminaries of a keel-laying ceremony for the new destroyer-escort vessel at V.M.D.'s Dallas Road plant and attended a public reception at Club Sirocco this afternoon.

His comment on the Conservative-Social Credit matter came during an interview when he was told of the belief held by many British Columbians that the two parties are similar.

DOESN'T UNDERSTAND

Asked if he could draw the lines of comparison between the two, the Tory chieftain laughed and said:

"I understand the Conservative policies, but I must confess I can't understand the Social Credit policies."

In reply to a question, he said he saw no danger of his party in B.C. being "swallowed up" by the Social Credit movement.

He then went on to explain the dangers of a country having too many parties.

"If there's one lesson we've learned from France, it's the danger of distributing the representation among a lot of parties. This in the end forces a marriage of utterly incompatible groups for the mere purpose of forming a government," said Mr. Drew.

U.N. Expert Reports Gas Charge Untrue

SEOUL, Nov. 14 (Friday) (AP)—A sensational charge by South Koreans that Chinese Communists used gas shells early today in capturing Pinpoint Hill was termed unfounded by a United States chemical warfare expert.

Lieut.-Col. Harrison A. Markham, chemical officer of the Ninth Corps, said after an investigation at the front that one soldier was made ill from picric acid fumes from a regular artillery shell.

Another South Korean soldier who was rendered unconscious was found to have been knocked out by a log when a bunker was blown up by an artillery shell, Markham added.

Even as the charges were laid to rest, the never-give-up South Koreans returned to the counter-attack and swept to the top of Pinpoint Hill from which they were knocked a few hours before.

Citizens' Group Asks Church Help on Brief

City Congregations Will Be Urged to Sign Petition Seeking Continued Liquor Control

Most Victoria churches will back a petition, asking the provincial government to maintain control of liquor distribution in this province, and to work toward reducing alcohol consumption of British Columbians, Albert Sullivan, president of the Greater Victoria Citizens' Committee, said today.

Copies of the petition will be available at many district churches on Sunday, Mr. Sullivan said, and most ministers have agreed to urge members of their congregations to sign it.

It is the plan of the Citizens' Association to have petition forms circulated in the downtown business district early next week so that as many supporters as possible will have an opportunity to sign.

The petition will be presented to the liquor inquiry board late next week or the week following, whenever the commission next sits here.

It will ask that reduction of alcohol consumption be the major object of the government's liquor policy; that all liquor sales be conducted through government-owned and operated outlets and that such outlets be kept to a minimum; that the government prohibit all liquor advertising; that ample funds from liquor profits be made available for alcohol education and rehabilitation of alcoholics, and that local option privileges be retained and protected.

Preamble of the petition points out that while Canada's population rose 75 per cent between 1923 and 1951, alcohol consumption increased 500 per cent throughout the land. It also submits that increased facilities for sale of alcoholic drink "always increases consumption and intensifies moral and social problems."

The petition also points out that 204,761 B.C. persons vote against sale of spirituous liquor by the glass in a recent plebiscite, and suggests this expression of opinion demands "great caution in any proposed change."

Copies of the petition will be available Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of next week at McGill & Orme's drug store, Fort and Broad, and at the Victoria Music Centre, 735 View Street.

$1 Million Fire Threatens Homes At Keremeos

KEREMEOS, B.C., Nov. 14 (CP)—A $1,000,000 fire destroyed a warehouse and an adjoining cold storage plant, containing $525,000 worth of apples here today. The fire is raging out of control.

The warehouse and storage plant is owned by the Co-Operative Fruit Growers' Association.

The homes of 10 families are in the path of the flames as a strong southwest wind whipped the fire.

Keremeos, with a population of 1,792, is 170 miles east of Vancouver.

The fire started about 10 a.m., and shortly before noon an ammonia plant in the apple storage warehouse blew up, hampering the work of firemen.

Fire fighting equipment has been rushed from Princeton, 40 miles to the west, and from Penticton, 33 miles away, to assist the Keremeos firemen.

The fire, believed to have started in an engine room, quickly swept through the plant offices. All employees escaped unhurt, but a stenographer, Mrs. Louise Van Unen, was forced to leap from a window. Workers salvaged office files but little else was saved.

Families living near the warehouse piled their furniture on the sidewalk as the fire inched toward their homes. Also threatened are the Elks' Hall, the Legion Centre and Victory Hall.

No Survivors In Washington Plane Crash

SHELTON, Wash., Nov. 14 (AP)—No survivors were reported by ground crews which reached the wreckage of a four-engine U.S. navy plane Thursday in the rugged Olympic peninsula country of Washington State.

Eleven men were aboard the Privateer which crashed and burned. Four bodies were found immediately by search parties which reported wreckage strewn over a large area.

The other seven passengers were presumed to have died in the crash and explosion of the Privateer which splattered against the forested hillside Wednesday night with a thunderous roar and blinding flash.
